President Taft Being Entertained at Historic Old Mansion in Wilmington.

Wilmington, Nov. 5.—The splendid colonial residence where President Taft is to be entertained by Mr. and Mrs. James Sprunt, on the occasion of the President's visit to Wilmington, on Tuesday, November 9th, is already associated with some of the most remarkable historical features of this old Colonial town.

The property originally was used for the first Colonial custom house built after the town became a port of entry, while it was known in its earliest days as Newton or New Liverpool, about 1730, some five years after the town and port of Brunswick had been established about fourteen miles lower down the Cape Fear river.

It is a remarkable fact that during Governor Dudley's railroad life, which was beset with many difficulties, the credit of the railroad company reached such a low ebb that a dealer refused an order for one hundred dozen shovels necessary for the work of construction, and it was only through the endorsement of private citizens that this great railroad undertaking, later to be evolved into one of America's great railway systems, was saved from premature bankruptcy.

A few years ago Mr. Walters, the present distinguished head of the Atlantic Coast Line, discovered in the archives of the company, written in Governor Dudley's beautiful handwriting, a letter in which the Governor resigned the presidency of the Wilmington and Weldon railroad for the purpose of representing his people in Congress, and in which he outlined for his successor a policy which, it is remarkable to relate, unconsciously had for years previously been adopted by the promoters of the Cape Fear Line without any knowledge of Governor Dudley's far seeing wisdom.

In the historic mansion where the President is to breakfast on the morning of November 9th, another scene of remarkable interest occurred in the dining room on the occasion of the marriage of Governor Dudley's eldest daughter to Lieutenant Johnston, U. S. A., stationed at the military post of Fort Caswell, on the Cape Fear at Smitville, now known as Southport.

His host, Mr. Sprunt, is himself one of the master figures in the commerce of the United States, he and his brother and partner, Mr. Wm. H. Sprunt, constituting the firm of Alexander Sprunt & Son, which is the most extensive cotton exporting firm in America.

No Rest Day or Night

"I would lay awake for hours without any apparent cause, or dream terrible dreams which would bring on extreme spells of nervousness. After taking Dr. Miles' Nervine and Tonic for awhile I could sleep well, and the nervous spells have left me."

R. R. No. 4, Canal Dover, Ohio.

Without sleep the nervous system soon becomes a wreck, and the healthful activity of all the organs obstructed. Restful, body-building sleep accompanies the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine because it soothes the irritable nerves, and restores nervous energy.

ABOUT PRINTING COURT NEWS

All or None Should be Printed, and News Value of Some Make it Necessary to Print All.

This from the Raleigh Times: "Every newspaper man knows what it is to be besought to leave certain matters out of the paper. The request not to mention some particular item of news is indeed a frequent one. Interested parties for some reason do not want their names or the names of their friends to appear in print. The request is made as to various matters and on various pretexts, but the most frequent cause for requests of this kind is the court records, especially the police court. And in matters of this kind this paper wants to say that requests not to publish certain names in connection with misdemeanors will not be listened to. This paper prints the doings of the police court as a matter of news. Its readers expect it to publish such news and the paper does not believe in publishing a part of that news and suppressing another part. The only fair way is to publish all or none, and since it is legitimate news the only really fair way is to publish all."

Every newspaper has this question to meet, and the only proper way, as the Times says, is to publish all or none. Of necessity some must be published, because the news value requires it; therefore, to be fair, all must be published. There are many cases in the police courts that are of little consequence and so far as their news value is concerned could be allowed to pass. But if an important case is passed, the party concerned in an important one may desire the same privilege, and if it is not extended he will think he has been unjustly treated, that the paper is discriminating against him because of prejudice. The relative value of the case as a news item, or the importance which makes its publicity necessary, will not appeal to him. He will see no difference in one case and another. Therefore an editor who desires to be fair and to avoid charges of discrimination, is compelled to publish all cases that pass through the courts. It is pass strange, too, that persons who seem to consider it no disgrace to make a public exhibition of themselves when drunk, to engage in disorderly conduct or other forms of law-breaking, profess to feel so disgraced if the fact is made public that they were arraigned in court which they were disgraced when they violated the law, but they don't seem to realize that fact. Another mystery is that an appeal will be made to the paper to suppress the item—and they often feel aggrieved when it is not done—without a moment's consideration of what such a course means to the newspaper. They do not consider that a newspaper is under contract to give the news and that its life depends on its doing that, that if it suppresses news, or prints an item about one and shields another in a similar case, the paper's reputation is damaged and its business injured. A newspaper's character is like a man's character, and if it would succeed it must maintain a reputation for honesty and fair dealing. And yet a request which may mean serious damage to the reputation of the paper and its editor, and consequent damage to the business, will be preferred as if it was of no consequence. When it is considered how little regard violators of the law have for a paper's reputation or business when they seek to have it shield them from the consequences of their own folly, the wonder is that the requests are heard with patience. An editor, however, is always willing to accommodate folks when he can, and personally is often willing to do things that he is unable to do as an editor without serious damage to his own reputation, and certainly it is an editor's business to take care of his own character and reputation. But the most tiresome of all these folks are those who think they should be shielded because they pretend to think their social prominence entitles them to special privileges, while those whom they do not consider socially or otherwise prominent are not, in their opinion, entitled to any consideration. This view is so unreasonable and unjust that the Landmark cannot discuss it with patience.

Cotton Picker Makes Good in Marlboro County, S. C.

The Brasington and Price Campbell cotton pickers have both been demonstrated in the cotton fields of this country. The former gathers the staple by the suction process. The tubes can be multiplied indefinitely, each tube picking 500 pounds a day. It is claimed that the Brasington, or "Wizard Picker," will gather 75 per cent less trash than is done by the ordinary hand picking, while vibrations of the machine extract a very large per cent of the grit and dirt from the cotton. Mr. Brasington will have these large machines ready for next season, with 15 horse power gasoline engine, mounted automobile fashion, operating from 10 to 15 tubes. Those who have witnessed the operations and demonstrations of the Wizard Picker believe that it is a success, and it will be generally adopted by the cotton planters.

PRISONERS BURN CALABOOSE.

John Probst and Charlie Sane Fire Guard House at Lilesville and Barely Escape Incineration.

Two young white boys, John Probst and Charlie Sane, were placed in jail here yesterday in default of $250 bonds, charged with the burning of Lilesville's guard house late Sunday night. They are both from the western part of the State and had been working at Jonas' saw mill in Lilesville township. Sunday evening they got drunk and were making lively scenes around Lilesville at a late hour Sunday night. About 10 o'clock they were arrested and placed in the guard house, so that the town's population could get a little sleep. After midnight some one heard them calling for help and then it was found that the guard house was on fire. With much effort the young boys were rescued from the burning building, but not until one of them was severely burned about the hands. Then the fire raged until Mr. J. A. McAllister's shop and almost all his tools were burned. The citizens managed to barely save the nearby stables and other buildings. The boys were tried before Esq. A. I. Allen yesterday and the fine and cost amounted to about $15 each. They were bound over to court for burning the guard house and required to give bonds of $250 each or go to jail. Not having the cash or bondsmen, they were compelled to choose the latter course. The young men, when seen at the jail this morning, stated that they did not burn the building purposely, but were drunk. Dr. J. M. Covington, Jr., county physician, dressed the wounded hand.

RESULT OF TUESDAY'S VOTING

Tammany Elected a Mayor in New York—Constitutional Amendment Defeated in Maryland—The Result Elsewhere.

The New York municipal contest probably attracted more attention than any of the elections Tuesday on account of the strenuous campaign. Judge Gaynor, Democrat and Tammany candidate, was elected mayor by a large plurality, but the anti-Tammany Democrats and the Republicans elected the balance of the ticket. The board of estimate and control, which controls the city's finances, is controlled by anti-Tammany Democrats and Republicans. George Gordon Battle, the Tammany candidate for district attorney, a North Carolinian, was defeated.

Blind, Deceitful and Helpless She Stands Before Federal Judge and Confesses to Having Attempted to Defraud Government.

An aged woman, blind, deceitful and helpless, stood before Judge John J. Phillips in the United States district court here today and admitted that she had attempted to defraud the government by making a false affidavit to an application for a pension. Both the woman's attorney and the United States district attorney asked the court to be merciful in imposing punishment. "She cannot well go to prison," said Judge Phillips. "I will continue the case for sentence to some future time."
