Some shoe dealers will tell you they can't give you a good, durable shoe for $2.00 or $2.50. They are right, they can't. The $2.00 shoe they sell is made to fill a demand at this price—not to wear. It is made of seconds—from sole to heel.

The Southern Girl $2.00 Shoe $2.50

This same shoe is for "Autograph" brand, $2.50 and $3.00. In Goodwear will reward: In our College Women's Walking Shoe, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00. It equals the best custom made.

is a revelation to every woman who tries it for the first time. In style it is the equal of shoes that cost double the money. It makes the foot feel perfectly at home. It wears better than any shoe you ever bought for $2.00—because we use live leather—a quality sole, insole, counter, heel, linings. How can we afford it?

What 'Squire Cheers Found at Sanford and Raleigh.

Correspondence of The Journal.

Of his recent visit to his son, Mr. W. F. Cheers, at Sanford, 'Squire V. T. Cheers writes The Journal as follows:

I found the one I wished to see most busily engaged in gardening, and as I stood and watched him cutting and piling roots, using the rake, forking manure, etc., in imagination I again saw him on the farm engaged in the different kinds of farm work; and as I heard his boyish whistle and merry song as he cracked his whip over the team or drew his hoe through the cotton, I thought what a pity that such a good hand should ever leave the farm.

Sanford is a busy, hustling town of about 3,000 inhabitants, a great railroad center from which the traveler can go, day or night, in almost any direction. It has an oil mill, a cotton factory, iron foundry, knitting mill, two or three manufacturing plants, buggy factory, sash and blind company, veneering plant, etc.; a sewerage system and electric lights, a neat court house, with modern conveniences, that cost about $40,000, and a flourishing school. Land in and around Sanford is high in price, with the probability of going higher.

Almost any man who has ever seen the legislature at Raleigh in its closing days, naturally wants to see it again. So I called in and found it a very busy body as the session was nearing its close. Delegates were there from different sections of the State desperately in earnest to get their bills through for the improvement of roads and other matters.

While there I met several men of State wide reputation, but of them I will not write. There is one, however, that should be mentioned—and I would fail in my duty, be untrue to my county and State and to this remarkable man in not writing of him—and while much has been written, the half has not been told of this grand old man: Esq. Henry McWhorter of Union county. I found the 'Squire enjoying himself finely, and the most talkative and talked-of man I had met in Raleigh. He told me that he had gained thirty pounds since he went to Raleigh two months ago. In a day, and that this gain was caused by solid food furnished by the lady with whom he boarded, without any liquids whatever to assist. While the 'Squire was talking to me, I noticed a beautiful flower pinned on his coat. I could not resist the temptation to inquire how it came to be there. With a boyish blush he readily told me. He said that some one had circulated the report that he was a man of considerable property and that his wife had been dead a number of years, and that one of the most cultured and refined ladies of the city, as he was informed, had sent it to him; but, unfortunately, he had failed to learn her name.

Time is moving. I must leave Esq. McWhorter, with all his honors and enjoyment; I must leave the legislature for the people to judge of its work; I must leave the Capital City, with its broad streets and fine buildings—to all of its attractions I must say goodbye.

On the home stretch I formed the acquaintance of a gentleman who had been to Raleigh working for a bill to improve the roads of his county. He asked me many questions about my town and county. I told him of the great prosperity of Union county, of our many public works, our fine buildings, cemented streets, etc. To the country I carried him and told of the great improvement in farming, and showed him the neat country residences and churches and schools. Alas! he asked me about our roads and the system of working. My head lowered, my voice trembled, and I told him we had been talking—talk—talking about about good roads—but some were opposed to them.

I rejoice in the prosperity of Union county. When her young men and young women are honored in this and other States, I feel honored myself. What little influence I have, from young manhood up to the present time, has been used for the betterment of my county. And, men of Union, I call upon you and entreat you to quit boasting of the great prosperity of our county while the public highways are a burning, blistering shame to the good name of our county.

When, oh when, will some man or combination of men arise and devise some plan and lay the foundation for a better system of road working and for better roads?

Scents the Air With Sweet Guannar

As the lamented "Bill Arp" used to put it, "King Cotton has unfurled his banner and scents the air with sweet guannar." But, while cotton is still king on many farms in Union county, it is rapidly being dethroned over this section of the South and corn and other foodstuffs are having the crown placed upon their potent heads. And upon this awakening from the all-cotton craze to a realization of the important fact that real farming consists of making a living at home and employing such methods as will improve instead of impoverish land, rests the hope of our great Southern agricultural interests.

Mr. P. G. Richardson died Friday night about 8 o'clock at the home of his father, Mr. J. A. Richardson, who lives one mile north of town, of tuberculosis. Mr. Richardson was 21 years of age and had been confined to bed for the past several months. He was a member of White Oak Protestant Methodist church and was a young man of good character. His remains were interred in the cemetery at this place Saturday afternoon, Rev. L. T. Cardell conducting services.

We have all heard of patent and half-patent flour, but a customer put a merchant of this town to figuring a few days ago when he walked into a store and called for half-patent shoes. But of course the enterprising young shoe dealer had exactly what was wanted and the fellow went home fully satisfied with a pair of vici kid shoes with patent caps on the toes.

Government Expert Says Coco Cola is a Poison.

In the hearing of the case of the United States against a certain number of barrels and kegs of coco cola in the Federal court here today, some of the most interesting testimony yet brought out was given by Dr. Lyman F. Kebler, chief of the drug department of the bureau of chemistry, Washington, D. C. Dr. Kebler is the chemist who made a test of coca cola and today he testified that coca cola contains caffeine, declared that to each eight-ounce glass there was one and one-fourth grains of caffeine, which he says is poison.

Dr. Kebler cited many eminent authorities in proof of his statement that caffeine is a poison and referred to a number of deaths reported as being caused by its use. One of these writers had reported a case where four and one-half grains of the drug had produced death, and he declared that about three glasses of coca cola contained this amount of caffeine.

The Ventriloquist Got Bivens

Wadesboro Ansonian.

It was a mean joke played on the Ansonian man Wednesday night in the dining room of the National hotel. Always expecting something to "happen," his newspaper instinct was fired when a mournful sound was heard in the alley between the dining room and the Baptist church. At least there is where it seemed to be and those who heard it, thought somebody was in great agony of body or soul. One of the guests looked through a window and "thought" he saw a moving object. In company with several others, the newspaper man hastened through the room and explored the entire backyard, looking for a sign that would make at least a column of thrilling news matter. But there was "nothing doing" in the backyard and returning to the dining room, the heart-rending sounds appeared to be coming from an upper room in the hotel. But about this time it was found out that all the excitement was caused by a ventriloquist, seated at one of the tables.
