The Gathering of the Democratic Tidal Wave.

President Taft's vetoes of the farmers' free list and of the downward revision of the wool tariff schedules, only serve to throw into sharp definition the impressive lesson of Democratic constructiveness as exemplified at the present session of Congress.

The credit of achievement, and the responsibility of obstruction, are placed exactly where they belong. Under the handicap of a Republican President, and of a Republican Senate the Democratic House of Representatives has carried through an extensive and efficient program of relief to the public. Backed by the Nation, it has even beaten down some of the Senate barriers, has imposed terms and conditions on the garnison of that stronghold of reaction, has won victory for reciprocity after it had been repudiated by the last Republican Congress, has passed the free list bill, the wool bill, the cotton bill, the Statehood bill, the direct election of Senators resolution, besides inaugurating far-reaching retrenchments, and curbing the trusts by investigations that have done more to check lawless monopoly than has any other bit or bridle tried in the last twenty years.

But now, between the Democracy and the people to whom it brings rescue, rises another fortress of privilege, as in the battle of Germantown, during the Revolution, a single stone house, garrisoned by a company or two of British, stood between Washington and the capture of Philadelphia. That fort is the White House. It is there that Mr. Taft, wielding the veto power, waves signals of encouragement to the standpatters of the Senate, the Paynes, Cannons and Dalzells of the House, and uses the authority vested in him to neutralize the splendid campaign of Democratic progressiveness.

It will not be neutralized. By his reactionary vetoes, and the threat of other reactionary vetoes to come, Mr. Taft only opens the way to a decisive mopping out of a Democratic triumph greater than that of 1910. The remedy for obstruction is militancy. The Democratic worker of 1911, balked of the just objects for which he works, becomes the soldier of 1912, as he was the soldier in 1910. The hosts which won the nation-wide Democratic victory last year, by a multitude of Republicans, who have waited and watched, reserving decision until they should see whether the Republican crash of 1910 had taught their party any statesmanship, whether Mr. Taft had profited by that severe experience.

These sentinels on the watch-towers of Republican politics now have their answer. They have seen relief to the country near. They have seen it brought by Democratic hands. They have seen President Taft interpose his vetoes between the givers and the recipients.

They have also seen that in the struggle of the past months in Congress, all the progressive elements that fought against downward tariff revision, and other measures of progress, and, when driven to bay, haggled for any vantage-point that might tell against the people, and for the privilege interests, were Republican.

Nineteen ten was the year of revolt of the independent voters from the Republican party. Nineteen twelve will be the year of that extensive following, who, while not thick and thin party men, are bound tighter by the ordinary ties of party affiliation than that class generically described as independent voters usually are.

Thus we have a three-fold set of conditions:

1. The Democracy solidified and strengthened during the interval between 1910 and 1912.

2. The independent voters, who contributed so much to the Democratic success of last year, confirmed in their faith by the record of Democratic achievement in 1911.

3. The warp and woof of the Republican party disintegrated by the disaffection of those Republicans who have held their judgment in abeyance until now, but who have definitely come to the conclusion that the people have nothing to expect from the Republican party.

A situation made of such component parts presupposes only one result. What that result will be is shown by the steady and inexorable gathering of the Democratic tidal wave of 1912. — National Monthly.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, etc. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Three Deaths.

Marshville Home.

Mrs. J. B. Staten died Friday at her home in New Salem township, aged 35 years. She was a member of Olive Branch church and was a good woman and a devoted wife and mother. She leaves a husband and eight children to mourn their loss. Funeral services were conducted Thursday at four o'clock by Rev. A. Marsh and the remains were interred in the Simpson graveyard in New Salem township.

In a cotton gin at Big Lick, Stanly county, Saturday afternoon, Mr. Pearsall Burrus had an arm so badly mangled that it had to be amputated. Loss of blood from the wound caused Mr. Burrus' death Sunday morning about eight o'clock. Mr. Burrus was 39 years of age and leaves a wife and several children. He was a good citizen and his seemingly untimely death was a great shock to the community. His remains were interred yesterday at ten o'clock in the cemetery at Union Grove.

Mr. J. C. Griffin of New Salem township, died Friday morning, aged 84 years. Of course he was living on borrowed time, but dropsy was the immediate cause of his death. Mr. Griffin was a good old man and leaves a large family of children to mourn their loss. Messrs. J. C. Griffin of New Salem township, J. I. Griffin of Goose Creek township and J. S. Griffin of Tennessee are the surviving sons, and the daughters are Mesdames G. W. and J. R. Williams of New Salem township and Eli Nance and Elisha Mullis of Marshville township. The burial took place Saturday at two o'clock at the family graveyard near the home of the deceased.

Little Boy Burns His Sister to Death.

Mooreville, September 18—The little two-year old child of E. G. Friday of this place was a victim to a malicious and horrible death Friday night, the facts of which have just been learned. The child and a four year old brother were playing in the kitchen while the mother was ironing in an adjoining room. The boy secured a small stick and lighted it at the stove and then applied it to the child's clothing. The little girl was burned from the waistband to the head and was a terrible sight. In the child's terror it inhaled the flames, which resulted in its death. The boy, when asked why he had set fire to his sister's clothing, said "Just cause." He seems to have a mania for burning things, he having applied a torch to the child's hair one day last winter, and set fire to the window curtains.

MASURY'S

You insure your house or barn as a protection against fire. You wouldn't insure it in a company you didn't know was reliable.

Paint is simply another kind of insurance, a protection against weather. It costs a lot more than fire insurance and is worth a lot more because when you insure a building you don't know it is going to burn down. There isn't one chance in a hundred that your protection is really going to benefit you.

If you use good paint you know absolutely that the protection is going to save you a big loss. At least the value of the building, for it will make it last twice as long. If the paint isn't good the protection is worthless, so why shouldn't you demand the same reliability with your paint that you do with your fire insurance? You will get it if you buy paint from us.
