Reasons Why The Great Majestic You Should Buy

- 1st. It has the reputation of being the best range money can buy.
 - 2nd. It not only has the reputation, but IS the best range made, and we will prove this to you if you will let us.
 - 3rd. It is constructed of malleable iron, material you can't beat, and of Charcoal iron, material that resists rust 300 per cent greater than steel, is riveted together air tight. No heat escapes or cold air enters the range, thus uses very little fuel to do perfect work.
 - 4th. The reservoir alone is worth the price of range over any other reservoir made. It boils 15 gallons of water; is heated like a tea kettle, with pocket against left hand lining, and is movable and sets on a frame, hence cannot wear out. When water gets too hot it can be moved away from fire.
- Majestic Ranges use less fuel; heat more water—and heat it hotter; cost practically nothing for repairs; last three times as long; bakes better; easier to keep clean and gives better satisfaction than any other range on the market. If you are positive that the above statements are true, wouldn't you buy a Majestic at once? Come in Demonstration Week and We'll prove it to you.

BILL CHANDLER DEMOCRAT?

The Man Who was Responsible for the Steal of 1876 — Has Been an Erratic and May Now Become a Democrat.

(Savoyard.)

Some time in the late fifties of the last century, after the death of the Whig party and the overthrow of the Know Nothing party, many thousands of old Whigs of the South were practically without a party, though most of them, like Archibald Dixon of Kentucky, followed Henry A. Wise into the Democratic party. One Jordan Clark, the John Temple Graves of that day, made an announcement in a Memphis paper that the famous Parson Brownlow of Tennessee, had concluded to become a Democrat, whereupon Brownlow made emphatic and indignant denial in a remarkable pronouncement that contained things like these: "I may consent to be a member of your party when Democrats cease to lie, steal and drink mean whiskey. I perhaps will consider the thing when Napoleon III, Emperor of France, and Alexander II, Czar of Russia, shall voluntarily abdicate their crowns to become members of the United States Senate from the territory of New Mexico. I will advise about it when Queen Victoria shall apply to some Justice of the Peace in Kansas for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii from Albert Prince Consort." And there were other ensanguined stipulations to the same effect.

And now there are rumors deep laden with the portentous tidings that Bill Chandler is to become a Democrat. Mr. Chandler is the one citizen of this republic who made a President of the United States "by his lone self." On the night of the presidential election in 1876, when even the head of the Republican ticket made a speech of surrender, and everybody else, including Chandler himself, had given it up, Mr.

Barnum, the chairman of the Democratic national committee, addressed a thoughtless and fateful note of inquiry to The New York Times, a Republican newspaper, asking for returns from the election in South Carolina, Florida, and Louisiana. That note was shown to Bill Chandler. In such a situation as was thus presented to such an observation as his, Bill Chandler is the most adroit, the most resourceful, and the most audacious man in the world. As quick as a flash his nimble mind discovered that the Democrats were not quite absolutely assured. So he wrote a half dozen lines claiming 181 electoral votes for Hayes and the election of the Republican candidate, and signed Zach Chandler's name to it as chairman of the Republican national committee, who was then fast asleep in Chicago, having gone to bed utterly defeated and humiliated. The next morning the Republicans took heart, claimed everything, and subsequently they stole everything—all because Bill Chandler was not in Tibet, or Tophet, when Barnum sent that momentous inquiry to The New York Times.

Though born in Yankee land, it may be opined that, like Daniel Webster and Benjamin F. Butler, also natives of New Hampshire, Chandler is neither Puritan nor Pilgrim, but Scotch-Irish. Be that as may be, he is of Whig antecedents, and reckless as the statement may seem, stranger things have happened than the advent of William E. Chandler into the Democratic camp. A son of William Lloyd Garrison became a Democrat, and Garrison himself, who had championed "the tariff of abominations," lived to champion absolute free trade, the repeal of all tariff duties, and the abandonment of all custom houses.

A great grandson of Roger Sherman, grandson of Samuel Hoar, son of E. Rockwood Hoar, was a Democratic member of Congress from Massachusetts 20 years ago. So was a son of John A. Andrew, the great war governor of Massachusetts, and so also was a son of Edward Everett. But Edward Everett, like Daniel Webster, Rufus Choate and Robert C. Winthrop, was a "Cotton" Whig, whereas the Hoars were "Conscience" Whigs. And right here it may be remarked that there is tradition that Henry Cabot Lodge narrowly escaped mugwumpery and it is the mere whim of casualty that he did not become a Democrat, and the same may be said of Theodore Roosevelt, who was cruelly though not fatally, bitten by the tarantula of mugwumpery in 1884. There is a story, and a prosperous anecdote it is, that it was the admision of William C. P. Breckinridge that saved both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Lodge to the G. O. P., but it is a little too strange to command full credence.

Bill Chandler is a Harvard man and therefore he is of the blue blood, by training at least. At the age of twenty he was admitted to the bar and appointed reporter of the State Supreme Court. He was repeatedly a member of the State Legislature and once Speaker of its House of Representatives. Lincoln appointed him Judge - Advocate - General of the Navy Department and Johnson made him assistant Secretary of Treasury, an office he resigned in 1867 when the quarrel between the President and Congress became intensely bitter. He helped make the present constitution of New Hampshire in 1876. That winter he went down to Florida and reversed the vote of that State by taking it out of the Tilden column, where the people had put it, and throwing it into the column of Hayes, where it was absolutely necessary to "elect." Garfield appointed him Solicitor - General, but the Senate, for some reason or other—his work in Florida, doubtless—rejected him, the Senate being a tie, politically, with old Dave Davis president pro tempore and holding the balance of power.

Subsequently he was Secretary of the Navy in Arthur's Cabinet. In 1889 he took his seat in the United States Senate, in which body he was conspicuous twelve years.

His administration of the Naval Department was successful in that it was a great improvement on that of the twenty years preceding; but it was not until Cleveland came in that John Roach was made to take his hand out of the public crib. There is this to be said of Chandler, that in matters of pecuniary meum et tuum he is thoroughly honest, and he will not allow any stealing by anybody if he can prevent it. It is that mainly that makes him so cordially hated at home and in Washington.

In the Senate Chandler was not exactly the stormy petrel that LaFollette is, but he was aggravating to a degree. He was the most vigilant member, ceaseless and untiring in industry and activity. If there was any graft on deck he was mighty apt to detect it, all he saw he exposed, and a great deal of it he defeated. If there was any political mischief a-brewing, certain it was that he promoted it. From the day Ben Tillman made his vicious and ignoble assault on Cleveland and Carlisle, Chandler was his friend and boon companion, and Chandler's other friend and boon companion was Cabot Lodge. But Chandler was a valuable public servant in that he kept the Senate on edge every sitting he attended.

If my observation was of any account, Chandler would not have put on sackcloth and covered himself with ashes if Bryan had been elected in 1896. Immediately after the inauguration of McKinley he became an insurgent. So far as I remember he was the last member of either house of Congress to advocate the coinage of silver as a full legal tender currency. He appealed to nature as authority, and cited that for any given period of a series of years the production of silver was practically 16 to 1 of gold in the element of weight, which was nothing in the world but a reiteration of Bryan's contention that a bushel of wheat and 412 1/2 grains of standard silver were always and everywhere of equal value.

The Republican platform of 1896 contained a plank that was a pledge to send a commission to Europe to plead with statesmen and financiers to rehabilitate silver as a money metal on a parity with gold. That plank was inserted to counteract the defection of Teller and Stewart, and for the benefit of Wolcott. They might have offered to send over there to ask Europe to join with the United States in a declaration that "hants" exercised a material influence on the social, political, and spiritual affairs of mankind, and they would have done that, too, had they thought their ewas a vote in it.

When Chandler made his speech it was on the proposal to raise the commission, which was done with a solemn face. My old friend, James B. Creary, of Kentucky, was one of the commission and he was the only man in the world who took the thing seriously; but then, he would have entered upon the hunt expedition with equal gravity. Of course nothing came of it but a junket and silver dropped out of our politics with a dull thud.

Bill Chandler, a natural born insurgent, kept it up until the Boston and Maine railroad pitchforked him out of the senate—giving his seat to one of its attorneys. Subsequently Chandler ran with Roosevelt in the mighty octopus chase. Daily and diligently he fetched and carried between the White House and Tillman and Bailey until Teddy put him in the Ananias Club. The late Midas Harriman did not live to get even with Midas Ryan. Will Chandler ever get even with Roosevelt? You bet he will. And Chandler is to be a Democrat! Well, well, well!
