No One Likes To Pay For A Dead Horse.

Maybe you never had to do it, but you have had the same experience in paying for something else you bought on credit. You have probably rejoiced that your "face" was good for a little neat account and going forth, enjoyed the blessed (?) privilege of having the suit of clothes or pair of shoes "charged." You knew that you could have gone without them, but what was the use of waiting till you had the money when the merchant even urged you to take them. Later on, however, you learned that pay day comes as surely as five o'clock and you may also realize that you could have bought the articles cheaper with the cash in hand. If not then, the time is coming when you can do it, for practical people are not going to help bear the team it does expect to find in such a disastrous season. The man who has the money is not going to help the merchant share the debts made by the dead-beat. No, sir, the business-like man is going to pay cash and buy the goods for less. He may not start out at the big end of the horn, but watch him emerge from that end when the game is finished.

The farmer who bought food supplies, fertilizers and high-priced mules on credit this year realizes now the folly of the credit system and the merchant who encouraged him, is also bearing his share of the burden. Of course, the low price of cotton has made it worse, but a system having such an element of risk in it, snacks of gambling and should be discouraged for that, if no other reason. It has been of benefit to a few people, but in a greater number of cases, it has kept those who indulged in it at the bottom, unable to elude. The profits they should have enjoyed, as a result of their labors, have helped to make others rich, and faced by such conditions, they have finally become discouraged and failed to do their best. If thrown on their own resources many of the people, who have to be "furnished" from year to year, would find a way to finance themselves and step by step, climb to a position of independence. Now is the time to plan such a course which, if followed up, will result in a happier and more prosperous life during the coming year.—Ansonian.

SANTA CLAUS COMING!

In order to make room for my Christmas goods and toys I will offer at a great sacrifice my entire stock of goods. Special—83 suits of clothes for men and youths, 49 suits for boys, 213 pair of pants and one of the largest stocks of shoes to be found in the country, all of which will be sold regardless of costs, also a nice selection of trunks and suit cases. Special sales on each Saturday. Crops are short and cotton is low is why I make this great sacrifice. The largest lot of toys, fruits, candies, and Fire Works ever brought to the country, all of which will be sold at a big discount. I placed my orders on a basis of 15-cent cotton. Everybody come and get the advantage of the big sale. If you fail to come you will regret it. Wanted, 500 turkeys and all the produce I can get. Respt.,

The Noblest Profession and Its Duty to the Public.

Not infrequently this paper takes occasion to emphasize its conviction that the medical calling is the noblest profession among men and its members are the most useful members of society. The true physician can and does do more good than men in other callings. They come in more intimate relations with the people and touch their lives more for help than men in any other calling. Not many have lowered the profession by commercialism, but some are causing it to lose a measure of respect which it is entitled by a thoughtful giving of promiscuous prescriptions of whiskey and a few who are unworthy members of the noble profession stoop to make money by giving too many prescriptions for whiskey in prohibition territory. The Monroe Journal contains a thoughtful and sensible editorial on the matter which should be read by every physician in the State. It is as follows:

Up to the Doctors.

Last week a man came to Monroe under the influence of whiskey, and it is reported on good authority, that he had a quart with him. He got two more quarts from the "medical" depository, with a doctor's prescription, and he also got into the hands of the law for being drunk and will answer the charge in the court. He brought his prescriptions with him when he came to Monroe. During the month of November there were more than a thousand prescriptions written for liquor and filled at the depository. How many drunks and court scrapes came from these prescriptions nobody knows. There is one thing that we do know and everybody else knows, and that is that a great many of these prescriptions were not really for medicinal purposes and that they were not issued to bona fide patients as the law requires. Now we appreciate the fact that our physicians are under some difficulty in this matter, and we are not going to rail at them. It has been claimed by some that one physician would, if he refused a prescription, lose a patient to another physician who would grant the request for a prescription. If this idea has weight with some, it is nevertheless a poor argument. It is certainly unprofessional to violate law, and since the medical fraternity is something of a stickler for ethics along other lines, there should be no difficulty of putting this practice under the ban so that a member who is disposed to take advantage of the others (if there be such) would be deterred from so doing. Besides this, there are some doctors who give no prescriptions whatever, and others who give very few, and all seem to be holding their practice. The Union County Medical Association has no trouble in standardizing a fee bill nor in maintaining a delinquent list. The organization can certainly take up this matter of prescriptions and in justice to each other and the public (which grants them the exclusive privilege of writing prescriptions) secure such action as will end out the abuses. The doctors owe it to themselves to make a move.

There are occasions when every doctor prescribes alcohol for his patients, but the best doctors give it seldom and rarely to men who apply for such prescription. Some years ago when Raleigh was under prohibition—(before State Prohibition)—a citizen of Raleigh called to see one of the first doctors in the city desiring to get a whiskey prescription. He said: "Doctor, I am feeling very unwell today and I wish you to give me a prescription for some whiskey." The wise doctor said: "Come in and I will make a diagnosis and after that will give you a prescription for the sort of medicine you need. If it is alcohol, the prescription will call for alcohol; if you do not need alcohol I will make the prescription call for the medicine you need." The doctor made the examination. The prescription called for nothing.

Notice of Administration.

Having this day qualified as administrator of the estate of H. W. Carriker, deceased, late of Union county, notice is hereby given to all parties having claims against the estate of said deceased to exhibit them to the undersigned on or before November 22nd 1912, or this notice will be pleaded in bar of their recovery.

All persons indebted to said estate will please make immediate settlement. This the 20th day of November, 1911.

in the nature of alcohol, the gentleman put it in his pocket and went away greatly disappointed. He never had the prescription filled. That doctor honored his profession. The doctor who complies with a request for a whiskey prescription in order to please a patient or to get a fee dishonors the profession. The example of that honored and honorable Raleigh physician should be the practical ethics of the whole profession.

The Rayo Lamp

It Never Flickers

The long winter evenings give a woman a splendid chance for sewing or embroidery; but her eyes suffer from the strain unless she has a good light.

The Rayo is the best lamp made.

It gives a strong, diffused light that is remarkably easy to the eyes. There is no glare to it; no flicker. It lights up a whole room. The Rayo is an economical lamp, too. You get the most possible light-value for the oil burned; and the Rayo itself is a low-priced lamp. Yet it is a handsome lamp—an ornament to any room in the house. The Rayo Lamp is easily lighted without removing shade or chimney; easy to clean and rewick. Made of solid brass, nickel-plated; also in numerous other styles and finishes.

Ask your dealer to show you his line of Rayo lamps; or write for descriptive circular to any agency of the
