TAR HEELS IN THE NAVY.

North Carolinians Prominent in the Navy—Two Naval Heroes.

Discussing North Carolinians who have been prominent in the navy, Major London of the Chatham Record says that in addition to five North Carolinians who have been Secretary of the Navy the State has furnished other men who were prominent in the naval service. John Paul Jones, the noted naval hero, was an adopted son of the State, and the story of two others, who are not so well known to the general public, is thus told by Major London:

Johnson Blakely was North Carolina's contribution to the navy in the war of 1812, and his sad and untimely fate was deplored by this entire country. He also was an adopted son of North Carolina, his father emigrating to Wilmington from Ireland in 1783, when young Blakely was two years old. At the death of his father in 1797 he became the ward of Col. Edward Jones (who was also a native of Ireland) and soon thereafter they moved to this (Chatham) county. Col. Jones became the collector general of North Carolina and died here (at Pittsboro) in 1841. Young Blakely entered the University from Chatham county and while there was appointed a midshipman in the United States navy. At the breaking out of the war with England in 1812 Capt. Blakely was given command of the brig Enterprise and afterwards the new sloop of war named the Wasp. With this ship he sailed to the English channel, thus bearing the British lion in his den, and on this cruise captured twelve merchant ships with their valuable cargoes and two warships, the Reindeer and Aven. Later she captured the Madeira Islands a rich merchant prize, the Atlanta, and sent the captured ship to Savannah. This was the last ever heard of Blakely and his ship, and it is thought that the Wasp was lost at sea in some violent storm. So highly did our State value his services, even before his last cruise, that the Legislature presented him with a gold sword and after his death the Legislature made an appropriation of $600 a year for support and education of his only child, a young daughter, until her marriage. In compliment to him the first academy at this place was named the "Blakely Academy."

James Iredell Waddell was one of the most famous naval officers during the war between the States, and as the commander of the Confederate warship Shenandoah, he did not haul down the Confederate flag and surrender until November, 1865, seven months after Gen. Lee's surrender at Appomattox. With his ship he was on a cruise in the waters near Bering Straits, capturing whaling vessels, at the time of Lee's surrender, and did not hear of that event until August. He immediately sailed for England via Cape Horn and arrived there in November, 1865, after a voyage of 22,000 miles without seeing land. On the cruise, before hearing of the close of the war, the Shenandoah captured 38 vessels and sailed on every ocean except the Antarctic and was the only ship that carried the Confederate flag around the world. The exploits of Capt. Waddell with the Shenandoah would fill a volume of most interesting matter if published. He was born at this place (Pittsboro) and was the son of Mr. Frank Waddell, who afterwards lived and died at Hillsboro. After the war he commanded one of the Pacific steamships, plying between California and China, and died several years ago.

Longer Grass.

A tramp went to a farm house, and sitting down in the front yard began to eat the grass. The housewife's heart went out to him. "Poor man, you must indeed be hungry. Come around to the back." The tramp beamed and winked at the hired man. "There," said the housewife, when the tramp hove in sight, pointing to a circle of green grass, "try that; you will find that grass so much longer."—Exchange.

Death of Mrs. Davis.

Waxhaw Enterprise. Mrs. Rosa Davis, wife of Mr. V. C. Davis, died at her home here shortly after 12 o'clock Sunday night, a victim of that dreaded disease, pellagra. Mrs. Davis had been in poor health for three or four years and early this spring her condition became serious. About two weeks ago the family noticed that she was growing much weaker. Last Wednesday night while sitting on the porch with Mr. Davis, she suddenly screamed and threw out her hands. She was gotten to bed and from that time until her death she tossed about in an awful agony of suffering. At times opiates had no effect upon her and there seemed no relief but death.

All that love and skill could do to relieve her suffering was done. From Wednesday night there was no hope for her recovery, but Mrs. Austin, a graduate nurse of the Presbyterian Hospital at Charlotte was secured and she did everything that kindness and thoughtfulness could do for the suffering one.

Mrs. Davis, who was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Hummelcutt, now of Monroe, was born November 8, 1875. She was in her thirty-eighth year. She was married to Mr. Davis in February, 1896. At the age of thirteen she united with the Baptist church and at the time of her death was a member of King street church.

She is survived by her husband and six children, who are: Miss Cleone Davis, Masters Carl, Keith, Hazel, Harry and little Ruth, who is known to family and friends as "Kempie." She is survived also by her parents; two brothers, Messrs. O. V. and M. D. Hummelcutt of Monroe, and a sister, Mrs. W. H. Hood of this place.

The funeral was conducted at the home here Monday afternoon by Rev. G. L. Merrell, pastor of the deceased, and the burial was at Waxhaw Baptist church.
