

The Arizona Kicker

"ALWAYS ON THE JUMP"

SPECIAL EXTRA U. S. A. SUNRISE EDITION

LIVE MAN WANTED.
The Kicker is in want of a new sporting editor.
Mr. George Thomas, who has held the position for a year, was shot last week over at Lone Jack as the result of a dispute.
The salary is $7 a week and a good deal of prestige.
All applicants must prove their ability to pull a gun and open fire within three seconds of being called a liar.

BUNGLING WORK.
The vigilance committee at Lone Jack seems to need an instructor.
It has hanged one man three different times, and yet he is walking around today in good health.

AN OVERSIGHT.
We beg pardon of our readers for neglecting to say a word last week, in the New York dailies, that our circulation is now three times as great as all other newspapers in the known world put together.
Also that our advertising has gone up from two lines to 200 columns.
This proves that real merit and genius are always liberally rewarded.

OPEN CONFESSION.
We understand that certain parties in this town have written the postmaster general that we play p-ker. Yes, we do, but we play it as editor and not as postmaster.
We would like to sit down in a game with the P. G. himself if he's inclined that way.

TOUGH LUCK.
Old Joe Wheeler claims to have seen a silver tipped bear near Sailor creek last Sunday.
If he is telling the truth, then he struck something at last he couldn't ask to buy him a drink of whisky or lend him a quarter.

TAMING A GRIZZLY.
Mr. James Scott, who calls himself the big grizzly bear of the Rocky mountains, rode his broncho into the Star saloon the other evening, but when he rode out again he was wounded in three places.
The owner of the place is not an impulsive man, but he objects to making a stable of his place.
The big grizzly is not so much of a bear as he was.
He intends to remove himself to some other town as soon as well enough for his journey. M. QUAD.

Promises Not Well Founded.
Statesville Landmark.

Mr. Hughes is telling the voters that if he is elected the United States shall have an economic, efficient, business administration. That is no new idea. All parties and all candidates usually make such promises. He will put aside the pleas of friends who want jobs, he will forget partisan expediency and bury all considerations except the welfare of the country. The American government, he declares, is not for partisan expediency, not for friends, nor for the party cause, but for the people. So it is, so it is. But the friends and the partisans can usually make it appear that their desires and the people's cause is one and the same. All "pork barrels," says Mr. Hughes—river and harbor and similar appropriations that are sometimes more for political purposes than for public benefit—will be cut out. All these things he will do, declares the Republican presidential candidate, even if it wreck his personal political fortunes.

Mr. Hughes would have us believe that he is far removed from the common run of political candidates; that in administering the government the people only would be considered; that efficiency and not politics would mark appointments to office. Mr. Hughes paints an ideal condition—one that should exist but one that never will exist until human nature changes. Abuses in public service can be reformed, of course, should be and will be, whenever the people choose to elect men to office who will not stand for them. But Mr. Hughes cannot expect the public to take his statements seriously—cannot expect the public to believe that he will be so different from other Republican Presidents—such as Taft, Roosevelt, McKinley, Harrison and others. These men put their friends and their friends' friends in office, no matter if the man displaced was efficient; and Republican Congresses have passed river and harbor bills and other pork barrel measures without limit. Even the eminent Mr. Roosevelt, who posed as an evangel of light on occasion, as a holier-than-thou, even as Mr. Hughes is posing now, and who denounced crooks unsparingly at times, did not hesitate when it suited his purpose to make to himself friends of the mammoth of unrighteousness.

Does anybody believe that the Republican party, who will elect Mr. Hughes if he is elected, has so changed that it would depart from the customs of the past? Does anybody believe that even if Mr. Hughes should want to do and should try to do, in the event of his election, what he pretends he will do, that he would be permitted to carry out the programme? If anybody does believe these things he should be bored for the simple.

And there is no evidence to show that Mr. Hughes would even try to play the high sounding role of which he talks so glibly. He was Governor of New York State and if he made any marked change for the better in the public service of that notably corrupt State, the public doesn't know it. Mr. Bryan says he had the support of the corporations and he stood by them when they elected him by vetoing a 2-cent fare law passed by the Legislature; that he had the support of the tax-dodgers and the owners of swollen fortunes, and that he repaid them by opposing the Federal income tax law. In short, it seems that as Governor of New York Mr. Hughes had the support of "The Interests" and that he stood by "The Interests" in this campaign and "The Interests" rather than the people, whose welfare he so earnestly professes to desire, would profit by his election.

Wider Fields.
Uncle Walt Mason.

The young men drift away from home; they go to Rathway and to Nome, to Boston and New York; and some of them will cross the sea, to try their luck in Gay Paree, in Edinburg or Cork. They go afar, to play the game, to win the laurel wreath of fame, acquire a goodly roll; their native village doesn't yield a chance, they want a wider field than Punktown-in-the-Hole. Yet Punktown is a goodly town, and here a man may gain renown, and wealth, and honors, too; but you are full of dreams, my lad, and so you'll hike for Petrograd, across the ocean blue. Across the hills and far away, you'll have a better chance, you say, as hosts have said before; and so you say farewell to all, and leave behind your father's hall, his roofing-tree and his door. I know you'd do as well at home as you will do, where'er you roam, but were vain to speak, for youth must tread the distant road, find for itself its own abode, its Eldorado seek. Go forth and hew and carve and build, and may the visions be fulfilled that agitate your soul! Go, wander 'neath a foreign sky, while we old codgers wilt and die, at Punktown-in-the-Hole!

Many a courtship is torpedooned on the sea of matrimony.

Let's not worry; we'll get the earth sooner or later.
