BORROWER HITS SOME BLOWS.

Thinks the Devil Will Give Poor Entertainment to Some People—Why Not Pray For Dry Weather—Wants Something Better in the Matter of Taxation.

Correspondence of The Journal.

Those aristocratic people on the marooned trains at the time of the railroad disaster mentioned by The Journal some time ago deserve some mention. Traveling people who think the railroads should always be prepared to furnish luxuries, such as ice cream, electric fans, and cigars, and turn up their noses at conditions in the South just because they happen to be caught in a disaster, would do well to remember that they might be the Jonah on the vessel that made it seem good to him who rules to send the disaster on us and them. A people that cannot look with any degree of sympathy for the railroad at a time like that and complain at not having luxuries served in time of distress will, when they reach their destination, complain mightily at the devil for not having an ice cream parlor, a dancing hall, electric fans and ice water and other luxuries such as they have in the North. But they will be gladly told by his satanic majesty that a bathing pool of fire and brimstone is the best in his shop. I know no language that will give a decent expression of my feeling for such cattle.

It looks as if the praying people of this water deluged Southland have lost faith in prayer. We know very well that if a drought had caused one-tenth the damage that the rain caused the people all over these stricken states would have been holding prayer-meetings asking Him who rules to send the needed supply of rain. He who rules has told us that when we need anything to ask for it in faith and it shall be done for us. Now while the downpour of rain was going on week after week, I was listening for some religious leader, the Governor of the State or some one in authority, to issue a proclamation asking us all to unite in one common cause and ask Him who rules to look on us in mercy and stay his judgment lest we perish. I can hear him saying, "Oh ye of little faith." We should remember that He who sends rain in answer to prayer would cause the rain to cease in answer to prayer if we pray in faith. Then if we don't pray it is evidence of little or no faith. This being the case the first thing we should pray for is faith.

Novus Homo, I can do you no good on the rural credit system. I hope The Student will give you the figures. If Mr. Myrick is right, I can't count a hundred. But I will say that Mr. Myrick's plan for rural credits is like the old woman who when her boy wanted her to buy him a fiddle. She said, "John, you can't play a fiddle; when you get to be a good fiddler, I will buy you a fiddle." Now Mr. Myrick says, "Gentlemen, when you own land enough so you can borrow money anywhere at any time then you just come to this government land bank and we will lend you money at just a little less interest and we will pull the wool over your eyes and make you think we are giving you a young fortune."

Mr. Homo, get Mr. R. F. Beasley to line up with you on this needed legislation, for you and he will be in the next General Assembly together and you create a sensation by letting the General Assembly know that it is the poor that is in need and not the rich.

What the country needs is a system by which all industrious laboring men can borrow money equal to his earning capacity. Now we know that some people are poor because they are no good. We are not asking that money be stamped and mailed to us by parcel post. We want every man to have what he earns and every man to earn what he has. How about it? In the sweat of thy face thou shalt eat bread. We want the people who are feeding and clothing the world to have a fair chance in the world.

Homo and Beasley, you know that when a piece of land is sold under the hammer that some old land shark that don't need it can buy it (say for a thousand dollars) and give it in at $400.00 letting it lie idle, thus paying tax on two-fifths of the purchase of the land and also creating a demand for land by holding it off the market. You know, Mr. representative, that the rule right here in good old Union county is this: If a man buys a piece of land for $1000 and goes to work on it and sells eggs and pays for it and builds a home and plants a vineyard and fruit trees and makes himself a substantial citizen, that the officers of the law will come around and say, "Look her, my friend, you must pay for such as this. We will double your taxes, sir. If you don't want to pay more taxes, go fishing and let the world around you perish."

Now, Mr. Beasley and Novus Homo, when you go to the legislature, you make a fight for a law that will let the shark know when he buys land in excess of his home need, that he may know that the taxes will be doubled on it in his hands; while if a man buys it that needs it for a homestead that the taxes will be very light to him. Give a man credit for what he does here in the world and charge him up with what he fails to do. You see the point? Encourage home building and discourage idle land owning. If you see a man that has a few hundred acres and wants more just to monopolize the land business and keep the land out of the hands of the people that God made it for, you tell him that Borrower would like to have a private chat with him.

I think we have got a lot of good people that are serving the Devil nicely. Of course they are serving him through ignorance. Remember that God has told us that he has taken the foolish things of this world to confound the wise, and now if some sorter foolish fellow in worldly wisdom undertakes to lead you into a bit of light along righteous lines, don't you fly off the handle. Remember the text. I am not in politics except on election day. I will vote. I am trying to denounce popular evils and when you see that I am wrong please drop me a letter to Monroe R. F. D. 8, and Mr. Cox will put it in the box.—Borrower.

(Some men in North Carolina who see the evils in our tax system worked for months, making speeches, paying their own traveling expenses, and doing all they could to get a constitutional amendment that would permit the legislature to enact just laws. The amendment was proposed, passed the legislature, and submitted to the people to be adopted in the fall of 1914. What happened? The people voted down the amendment, thus saying that they either didn't know what they were doing or preferred the old wrongs.—The Journal.)

A Spring Poem

Without Rime, but With Some Reason

I LOVE my dog!
Listen, and I will tell you why.
Every spring
My wife, my son and my daughter
Have new spring coats.
They visit the stores,
Select,
And the coats come to them.
I pay for the coats.

EVERY spring.
My dog
Has a new spring coat.
He does not visit the stores
Or select,
Yet the coat comes to him.
I do not pay for the coat.
That is why I love my dog!
—William Sanford in Judge.

Those Happy, Happy Days

WHILE the poets sing of halcyon days,
Of childhood days and May days,
We must regret
That they forget
Those happy days—the pay days.

THOUGH pay days come and pay days go,
There rarely is a sad one;
The poets, too,
Would tell it you,
But perhaps they never had one.
—Joseph P. Hanrahan in Life.

HE PROVED HIS CASE

It was the rush hour in one of those quick lunch places where you help yourself and use the arm of your chair as a table. A man called for a piece of pie and chose a chair. Then, remembering that he wanted coffee, he hastily put down his pie and dashed over to the service counter. When he returned with his coffee his chair was occupied by another hurriedly up diner.

"Excuse me," said the first man, "but this is my chair."

"How do you know it is your chair?" demanded the occupant in a surly tone.

"Because I can prove it," stated the first man.

"How can you prove it?" asked the occupant.

"By your trousers," was the confident reply. "You are sitting on my pie."
