THE MARSHVILLE FAIR.

Mr. Betts Tells All About What It Is To Be and Invites Everybody To Be Present.

(By T. J. Betts.)

Marshville, Oct. 23. — On next Wednesday at 9 o'clock a. m. will begin the greatest event that has ever taken place in Union county. The town will be Marshville and the place will be at the Fair Grounds on the lot surrounding the cotton warehouse. Everything is being put in shape for holding the biggest county fair the county has ever known.

The large tent, 100x150 feet, will be put up on Monday ready for exhibits of all kinds, and it is expected that every entry of whatever nature will be in place by Wednesday noon, so that the judging may be done on the first day.

This is important, since by having the judging done the first day, every visitor thereafter knows who is the winner.

From every nook and corner of this county men, women and children are coming to behold the vast exhibits of Union county farmers. Reports also from adjoining counties foretell that hundreds and hundreds of people are coming from them also. It is a safe prediction that more people will visit Marshville during the fair than has ever been known to gather for any like occasion.

Hon. L. D. Robinson, candidate for Congress will be present to open the fair, and the speech he promises to make will be a gem indeed.

The gigantic shows of the Majestic Amusement Co., will be in full swing on the opening day and each day thereafter, and there will be no end of amusement and entertainment of many kinds. Everyone will find just the kind of amusement which they are especially fond, and a great big time will be had in every particular.

On the second day many new features will be added, chief among them being the horse races. This feature promises to surpass anything of the kind yet seen in the county. Besides the many fast horses owned by Marshville horsemen, many from Monroe and other points will be present. Liberal prizes have been arranged for, and it is certain that every lover of horses and horse racing will be amply rewarded for his coming, in seeing something worth while in this connection. Also on second day, every merchant of Marshville is going to make special inducements in their stores and we don't hesitate to say that you can save more money by coming to Marshville on that day for your shopping, than you could anywhere else in the State. Then, you can take advantage of the fair and still be a way ahead in the game.

The third day will be set apart as County Education Day, and it is expected that all the school children of the county will be present, with teachers and officials. Mr. Joyner will probably be here to make an address and perhaps others interested in educational matters. On this day the Majestic Amusement Co. will put on special programs for the children and will aid in every possible way in making the day one long to be remembered for the school children of Union county.

Saturday, October 21, is the last day and the biggest day of all the fair. Many express the belief that we will see eight to ten thousand visitors at that time. And why shouldn't we? Again on this day we have the horse races in a final round-up, and the winner of these races will have an animal that he might well be proud of. The shows will do double duty that day and night and be prepared to entertain all who come. But the main big feature of the day will be an address by Hon. Cole L. Blease, Ex-Governor of South Carolina. The exact time of Mr. Blease's speaking has not been determined, but will be announced later. For this one feature alone, it is expected that no less than 5000 visitors will be present. Mr. Blease is a man different from all others. He is a fearless speaker, never dodging an issue and always says just what he believes, letting the consequences take care of themselves. You have heard and read a great deal about this great man and now you are afforded an opportunity to see and hear him for yourself—of course you will take advantage of it. Mr. Blease may use as his subject: "Woodrow Wilson, and why he should be re-elected." Be that as it may, any subject he might choose will be well handled, and don't you forget it.

In conclusion the fair management wishes to emphasize the following points: The tent will be ready by Tuesday noon and all exhibits must be in place by Wednesday noon when the judging will take place. A man will be hired to look after all live stock constantly and no person need fear that his property will not be properly cared for. Night watchmen will be on duty also and no prowlers will be tolerated.

In fact, everything will be done to make the fair a decided success. The premium list is liberal considering initial attempt, and we might say that the fair management reserves the right to add to the premium list, if they desire.

Any information will be gladly furnished by the secretary or any other officer of the fair association. If you don't understand, ask the secretary, T. J. Betts and he will explain anything possible. The following officers will help you out: C. B. Covington, P. P. W. Plyler and G. O. Mudge.

THREE SUBMARINES HAD A PART

Captain of One of Torpedoed Ships Thinks That Number Operated Sunday.

New York Dispatch, Oct. 10.

Captain Grotness, of the Norwegian tank steamer Christian Knudsen, one of the vessels sunk off Nantucket lightship Sunday, officially reported to his agents in New York today his belief that three submarines were operating in the lightship's vicinity.

Captain Grotness, in his report, said he was overhauled by the submarine U-53 and ordered to stop shortly after 7:30 a. m. two warning shots being fired across the bows. The U-boat then drew alongside and Captain Grotness was instructed to come aboard and bring his papers, which he did.

It was while standing on the deck of the U-53 that he saw, according to his report, the conning towers of the two other submarines about four miles distant. The conning towers, he said, were the same type as the conning tower of the boat he was on. The submarines he saw were moving in a northeasterly direction.

The cargo of oil aboard the Christian Knudsen was consigned to London. The U-boat commander, however, did not take any of it, as has been reported. Captain Grotness said the crew was allowed about half an hour to take to their boats before the submarine opened fire on the ship with her deck gun. About 150 shots were fired, most of which hit, but owing to the divided tank construction the ship did not sink. Finally the U-boat discharged a torpedo into her and she blew up.

Another point brought out in the report of Captain Grotness was the short time required for the U-53 to submerge. He reported that while she was shelling the ship a torpedo boat destroyer came into sight. The submarine commander evidently thought it might be an enemy war vessel, for he immediately submerged, sinking out of sight in thirty seconds. As soon as the destroyer came close enough for the American flag to be recognized he came up again, popping up out of the water like a cork.

Capt. Gunther Mahr, master of the Holland-American line steamer Bloomersdijk, one of the Sunday's submarine victims, arrived here today from Newport and reported to General Manager William Van Doorn.

Captain Mahr said he was allowed sufficient time to get away from his ship before she was sunk. He added that it was his first officer who went to the submarine with the ship's papers, and while there the officer identified the captain as Commander Rose. The number of the U-boat had been painted out, he said.

Only one submarine was seen by the men on the Bloomersdijk.

A Trip to South Carolina.

Written for The Journal.

I left home on Friday morning, Oct. 6th, for South Carolina by way of Waxhaw and on through the county northwest to Pleasant Valley. I soon became interested in the crops and that section of country through which I traveled. For 20 years back I had run fox almost on every acre of it. But I want to speak of that section between Waxhaw and Pleasant Valley. There has been such wonderful improvements all along the road, if I had struck that section not knowing where I was I would sure have been lost, for there has been such a change since I ran fox over those hills. It is now dotted with nice houses and big barns and fine cattle and good mules.

After we crossed Twelve Mile creek; Mr. John Rogers is putting up a fine house. Then I was surprised to see next Mr. Tom Haywood's nice residence and two big barns, one for stock and one for cattle; then Mr. Crane, Mr. W. C. Cunningham, Chas. Parks and Esq. George W. Sutton. All these people have homes and farms that show industry and good farming.

But while all that section I have mentioned has made wonderful improvements in the last few years, I want to speak with praise of Esq. Sutton's place. I believe he has got the coon and zone on (as the darkeys say). I believe he is using the most improved methods of any of the boys. While all those I have mentioned are doing good farming and made great changes, which shows there is more in the man than the land, Mr. Sutton's cotton is above the average for this year. He also has some fine clover, showing that he rotates his crops. Most all the people along the line are sowing grain.

But I want to speak of one thing I noticed to show that crops are short and that is, I did not see a field or patch of cotton on the road from Monroe to Pleasant Valley that a hand could do a good days picking in, as here was no cotton to pick. Something unusual for October in this section.

I found old Pleasant Valley on the move, getting ready for the opening of school and a big community fair on October 27. This, in a rambling way, may interest some one if it does not find its way to the waste basket. —R. W. Doster.
