The Booklovers' Club was charmingly entertained by Mrs. G. C. Pruitt last Friday afternoon. Daisies were used in quantities as decorations and a color note of yellow and white was carried out in the score cards, favors, which were small daisy baskets filled with mints. Pineapple sundaes and cake was served to the guests. Mesdames J. C. Sikes, N. M. Redfern, G. M. Smith and S. L. Rotter were the visitors.

Sorosis was entertained Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. E. M. Griffin, all members except one answering to roll call with most interesting current items. The topic for this ninth meeting was County Government in N. C. Before the first paper, The Organization of the County Government, was read by Mrs. J. D. Warren, the club joined in singing "Carolina." This paper included the officials of the county, and their duties, and proved most interesting and beneficial. Mrs. J. A. Stewart's history of the organization of Union county was exceptionally fine. Equipped with a large map of the county, each township was pointed out and the places of interest and importance explained. Each heart present was made to thrill and throb with pride at the progress we have made and the wonderful possibilities of our resources. An innovation in club circles has been the lectures which Sorosis has introduced and Mr. Gilliam Craig, our youngest member of the bar, was at his best when explaining to the mothers the "Practical Relations of the Various County Officers to the Citizens." He proved his mettle, too, by remaining "a lone, lorn man," for refreshments, which were delicious ice cream, strawberries, cake and salted almonds served by the hostess' daughter Mrs. N. M. Redfern, and grand-daughter, Miss Katherine Kyle Redfern. Visitors present, adding to the pleasure of the afternoon, were Mesdames John A. Wray, M. K. Lee, Gilliam Craig, N. S. Ogburn, Joel Griffin and F. B. Ashcraft.—Reporter.

Mrs. W. J. Heath entertained at two tables of bridge yesterday afternoon in honor of her sister, Miss Mary English, whose marriage to Mr. Clyde Skidmore takes place this month.
