HARDING A PUPPET.

The Republican platform and the nominee, Senator Harding, are accorded but little praise by the New York papers. The Times calls Harding "colorless," while the World refers to him as being a "country politician." The Sun, however, boldly comes to his rescue, averring that Harding fully represents the best traditions of American manhood. "Senator Harding," says the World, "is the perfect flower of Old Guard politics. He is an Ohio country politician with the mind of an Ohio country politician, and he sees the world through the eyes of an Ohio country politician. Being weak and colorless and mediocre, he appealed powerfully to the managing politicians who control the Republican organization, most of whom are Senators themselves. They know Harding, and they know that he will be a faithful agent of the organization. They have worked with him, and they can prove that he never had an original idea or entertained a thought that was outside the routine of a well-trained and well-disciplined party servant.

"The Republican platform adopted at Chicago is perhaps the best index to the Harding mind. Whoever is curious to know the mental process of the Republican candidate has only to read that platform. Those are the very terms and phrases in which Senator Harding thinks and in which he expresses himself.

"The Senator's friends are fond of comparing him with McKinley, but the resemblance is mainly superficial. Both came out of Ohio, but if Harding is a McKinley he is a McKinley without McKinley's personal charm, a McKinley without McKinley's extraordinary skill in managing men, a McKinley without McKinley's wide experience in public affairs.

"The Republican candidate has been a member of the United States Senate for more than five years, but his name is not identified with any important act of legislation or with any public service of consequence. He has voted as Penrose and Lodge would have him vote, and he has never displayed anything that could be regarded by the most liberal interpretation as independence or courage. His conscience and his convictions are simply the routine conscience and convictions of a professional Ohio politician.

"Of all the candidates whose names were presented to the Chicago Convention or who were within the range of the convention's choice, Harding, with the exception of Johnson and Poindexter, fell the furthest short of measuring up to the requirements of a President in this critical time. Lowden and Wood were eliminated by their campaign-fund scandals, but with Hoover and Hughes and Taft and Knox and even Coolidge and Sprout and Butler to select from, what more pitiful choice could have been made, in view of the colossal questions with which the next President of the United States must deal?"

"Senator Harding was nominated because the Old Guard Republicans want a President to whom they can give orders—a President who will take orders. Accordingly they present their puppet candidate in the person of Warren G. Harding of Ohio."

Fight fair! The report is being persistently circulated that Mr. Morrison received only 76 votes in his native county. The truth is, Mr. Morrison lacked but 92 votes of securing a majority over both his opponents, the vote being: Page, 674; Gardner 276; Morrison, 858. This is the official vote for Richmond county, where the Democratic fighter was born and reared. Rockingham county, where Mr. Morrison received but 76 votes, is in the western part of the state.

There is little doubt of Morrison's nomination, but there is some speculation as to the size of the majority that he will receive. Some place it at 10,000; others from 15,000 to 20,000.

"The Right of Way," With Lytell Coming.

"The Right of Way," in motion picture form, an adaptation of the famous novel by Sir Gilbert Parker, in which Screen Classics, Inc., presents the magnetic and versatile star, Bert Lytell, will be shown at the Strand Theatre Thursday June 17.

As those who have read the book—and it is estimated by Harper & Bros., the publishers, that they number well into six figures—will recall—this is a stirring, picturesque and unusual story of Canadian life in Montreal and again on the fringe of the north woods. The action revolves chiefly about the character of Charley Steele, called, for his dash and manner by his friends and enemies, both of which were numerous, "Beauty" Steele. The famous courtroom scene in which, after clearing a man of the charge of murder, Steele snaps at him, "Out of my sight—you're as guilty as hell!" opens the drama; and this same striking unexpectedness, this suddenness and almost stunning surprise is repeated in the various incidents which go to make up the novel which won for Gilbert Parker the title of Sir Gilbert Parker.

The production has been done with all the finish characteristic of Screen Classics, Inc., pictures, which are distributed exclusively by Metro. Under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karker, Director General, the piece was staged by Jack Dillon from the scenario by June Mathis. Robert Kurlie has achieved extraordinary photographic effects, and the supporting cast, including Beatrice Joy, Carmen Phillips, Gibson Gowland, Virginia Caldwell, Antrim Short, Henry Harmon, Frank Currier and Larry Steers, is exceptionally capable.

"The Right of Way" promises to be one of the real screen events of the season.
