Parties and witnesses need not attend court until the day set for the trial of the case in which they are parties or witnesses.

R. W. LEMMOND, Clerk

THIEF GETS BIG JEWELRY HAUL FROM RUDGE COMPANY

Entrance Into Store Made Through Rear Window Early Wednesday Morning.

About 2 o'clock Wednesday morning, Mr. G. B. McClellan, who is staying at the home of Mrs. J. R. Simpson, heard someone rolling a box or barrel. As it was raining, he did not make an investigation, thinking it was some night prowler getting wood from the rear of the mercantile establishments facing Main street.

REFUSING MAJOR HEATH'S OFFER, PRICE SAYS THAT THE "PICKINGS ARE GONE"

Of course you hate to give up this job, but I can't see why—the sop is all gone. I will do this much for the Major, if I have any influence with "Cam": I will try and help the Major get a job on "Cam's" fifty million dollar project. There should be some good pickings there and I do certainly love to see the Major eating that pie. The Major should not become so wrought up. I fear he will become ugly. Major, can't you hold your temper? Just be quiet, this new road law may be better than you think; we can't make matters worse, Major. I can't see how come you got so wrathful. You were out here and we had a chat just a few days before this mass meeting. I gathered inspiration from you and just as soon as you left I got right up and wrote that letter to the mass meeting that you cuss so. You said I certainly had been in conference with some of the "prominents" of Monroe. You must have been that "prominent" as you are the only one from Monroe that I have been in conference or near conference in a coon's age. I have read your speech and your letter over time and again and have come to the conclusion that all this fuss on your part is the thought of losing that pie. And I must confess that I am sorry for the Major. I know it will be tough on the Major for I do love to see the Major enjoying that good pie. You know, Mr. Editor, how pleased and congenial the Major is when he is eating that good pie. He has a smile that reaches from ear to ear and resembles the Bryan smile. But on the other hand did you ever notice the Major when de pie am 'bout to vanish, like he is looking now, he has lost that smile and now has his lips pushed out in contempt for every one that he surmises that has a hand in depriving him of dat pie. The Major sure am a puzzle!

Respectfully, J. N. PRICE.

THE MOST IMPORTANT JOB

None of Us Can Afford to Slight a Single Detail of Our Work

(From the Type Metal Magazine.) In a business institution there is no such thing as "the most important job."

There may be "the highest paid job," "the easiest job," or "the most responsible job," but the moment you try to put your fingers on "the most important job" you are in trouble. Whatever any of us happen to be doing may at any time become the "most important job" in its final bearing on the finished product.

Suppose you were manufacturing typewriters. You might send out the very best typewriter you ever made, and every man who had anything to do with it may have done his work to perfection, but if the machine was badly packed and did not arrive at its destination in good condition, you would then incur the ill-will of a customer.

Packing and shipping is therefore just as important as assembling, and assembling is just as important as selling typewriters.

A business is somewhat like the human body in that every part must function in co-operation with every other part, or the body will not function at all.

Is the heart more important than the lungs? Is the liver more important than the stomach?

The moment any of the four quit working life leaves the body. In the human system there are tiny glands about which the doctors know almost nothing. Yet they do know this: that if the secretions from these glands are stopped, the patient dies.

To me, these glands of the body are like the clerks, messenger boys, porters, truckmen, ticket sellers, conductors, motormen, stevedores of the business world.

The ease with which a man can be replaced does not measure the importance of his work.

During the moment that I am descending from the twentieth floor of a skyscraper in an elevator car, the operator of that car is doing "the most important job."

I may not even notice him, but for a few moments my life is in his hands.

So it is in business. At some time every day the god name of the company is in the hands of even the most lowly member of the organization.

None of us can afford to slight a single detail of our work, for just the moment we do that detail becomes "the most important job."

When a judge seeks re-election he promptly announces that women jurors may wear their hats and powder their noses, but so far we have not heard of one who has had the courage to declare a recess for the operation.

Men who talk in their sleep should marry women who are hard of hearing. They can't read lips in the dark.

Write a weekly letter for the paper telling about the visitors, the schools, church and everything else of interest in your community. Compose your first letter now. Get out your pencil and paper, and guided by the following "Hints," go to it:

Hints to Correspondents
1. Write on one side of the sheet and in a clean, legible hand, taking particular pains to write proper names plainly, leaving out no words, and numbering the pages.
2. Number the communications in short paragraphs, giving the NEWS in as few words as possible and leaving out all words and sentences unnecessary to a terse expression of facts, and do not put in anything simply to "fill up" or lengthen out the communication.
3. The following are the facts generally desired.
All births, marriages and deaths, when and where they occurred, giving full names of parties.
Removals into or departures from the neighborhood of any of your citizens, and the names of such as contemplate removing to or from your neighborhood.
Sales of land, how many acres, where located, whether improved or unimproved, names of purchaser and seller, and price.
All sales of stock, names of purchaser and seller, and price. It does not matter how small the sale; give them.
All fires, extent of loss, how much insurance, where located, and how the fire originated.
All improvements of any kind.
All persons who are seriously ill, and recoveries from sickness.
All cutting, shooting and other affairs, being careful to get a careful and unprejudiced statement of facts and giving nothing which may do injustice to and prejudice either party in public opinion.
All important meetings of Masonic, grange, temperance or other societies, giving, when you deem it important, a report of the proceedings.
All protracted meetings or revivals in any of the churches in your neighborhood, giving denomination, names of ministers, number of additions, amount of interest, etc.
What schools in your neighborhood are doing, number of pupils, name of teacher, and also account of such school exhibitions as are of special interest.
Mention lectures or public speeches made by any person of consequence in your neighborhood, and subject.
Condition of crops, giving names of farmers who have any large quantity of grain or other product.
Who are feeding hogs, cattle, mules or other stock, and number and quality of such stock.
All transactions, like sales of wheat, corn, oats, tobacco, which are of any size or importance.
What prospective enterprises or projects are on hand in your section.
Names of persons visiting your neighborhood and whom they are visiting.
The healthfulness of your section, and what epidemics, or plagues, or scourges, if any, are prevalent.
All curiosities of extraordinary growth, or old relics that you may hear of. Such things as curiously deformed hogs, horses, sheep, mules, chickens, etc.—monstrosities which think might excite some interest; also curious growths of corn, tobacco, etc. You may probably hear of such; if so, send them.
All sensational matter, like elopements, big hunts, fishing excursions, and all important social gatherings in your neighborhood.
In giving names of individuals be careful, when it is possible, to give the name in full and to write them plainly, as it is impossible for the printer to guess at a name when it is illegible.
Of course there are many incidents constantly occurring which we cannot possibly classify and suggest, and the gatherings of which we leave to your discretion.
What we want is all the news of any interest, and we don't care how long the letters are so long as they give what is going on.

Address all communications to THE JOURNAL, Monroe, N. C.

NOTICE
The Australian Ballot
Gov. Morrison's advocacy of the Australian ballot should forever remove the stigma of "machine politician" from his name.
The United States spends more money on tobacco than it does on automobiles. Two billion dollars a year is spent on autos but the tobacco bill exceeds this by $200,000.
Five hundred and thirty miles of hard road were built in Illinois in the last two years. Pennsylvania built fifty miles more than the Sucker State.
National forests in the eastern part of the United States are yielding a rapidly increasing revenue to the government.
