Primarily, of course, it is the soldier in war who is the patriot—he produces fighting qualities, his life, his all.
Just as important is the worker at home. Without him the soldier must fail.
We supported the soldier as far as we could. We honor and encourage the producer at home.

How President Harding Became a Kiwanian

(From Kiwanis Magazine.)

It seemed as though every possible resource had been exhausted. An especially selected and powerfully influential committee had been appointed to visit his home. They did but they failed of their purpose—not ignominiously at all but very definite, it seemed. That powerful committee constituted a last hope that had petered out. The other committees, district officials and representatives of International went on with the work in hand, however; namely, that of arranging details for the night's meeting, known as the permanent organization meeting of the Kiwanis Club, of Marion, Ohio.

Expectant of an event which was to make this particular Kiwanis Club forever individualistic, Kiwanis delegations were on hand in splendid numbers from every quarter, even beyond the borders of the state. Kiwanians of high rank within the organization; Kiwanians famous in the business and political world gathered at the hall where they learned that the word had come that the President-elect had found it impossible to be present.

It was known that hope had not been entirely abandoned in some quarters but those in charge of the meeting progressed as if the matter had been closed as far as the chance of making Mr. Harding a charter member of the Marion club was concerned. Of course, it would be useless to deny for one second the fact that the group of men, who had labored and apparently lost a brilliant coup planned on behalf of the whole Kiwanis institution, were disappointed.

But in spite of a little unsteadiness (easily understood) in the beginning, the meeting soon straightened away to a typically enthusiastic, swiftly moving, smartly conducted Kiwanis night.

The meal had begun at about seven o'clock so that by nine the business of the day was pretty well advanced. Suddenly there was a commotion at the doors and with barely a perfunctory announcement, Mr. Harding stepped into the room. Recognizing Senator Willis, the President stepped over and greeted him cordially. As if by magic a vacant place appeared almost under the President's hand. He was given a song of greeting, a courtesy extended visitors by many Kiwanis Clubs, and in a very few minutes the program was continuing on its way. As the business of signing up new members came to hand, the President was handed a formal application slip, which he immediately proceeded to fill out and sign. As soon as he had done this the chairman of the day asked him if he would not say something to the men.

Everyone present knew that Mr. Harding had had a terrific week. He was in the middle of his task of selecting a cabinet and this was only one of hundreds of problems he was striving to put behind as fait accompli. So when he answered with the plea that it should be very short he arose to face a mighty sympathetic but appreciative audience. He promised three minutes. Twenty minutes afterward found him so warmed to his subject that he was forced to close his theme with what speed he could and take his departure.

The Comeback—A Rotary Editorial by Dr. Crane

(From Rotary Magazine.)

I find that the way I am treated in the day's work depends upon the state of mind I bring into it.

If I enter a circle of men whom I take to be superior to me, I am likely to be snubbed. If I impute to them the feeling that I am inferior I will not fail to be inferior.

If I am self-confident, I awaken confidence.

If I eringe, I make others want to step on me.

If I am cheerful, cheerfulness is handed me by others.

If I am grouchy and snappy, they will bite me.

People go at me about the way I go at them.

There is a law in physics to the effect that action is equal to reaction. The ball rebounds from the wall with the same force with which it was thrown against the wall.

And if I approach a man with politeness, I usually receive politeness. I get from this world a smile for a smile, a kick for a kick, love for love, and hate for hate.

Of course there are exceptions to this rule. But if there were no rules there would be no exceptions.

And the difference between the man who knows how to play a game and wins regularly—any game, including poker business and the game of life—and the man who steadily loses, is that the wise man sticks to the rules and the law of the averages, and the fool "has a hunch" and stakes all his on the exceptions.

A good definition of a fool is one who thinks that this time doesn't count.

My tablets, therefore! Meet it is that I set it down that I am getting what is coming to me.

This is a world of law. Chance is only to be found in the dictionary. In the bright lexicon of fact there's no such word.

If I am petulant, unrestful, irritable, wretched, unsatisfied, and bored—I know the crop, and might have expected the harvest when I sowed the seed of self-indulgence, lack of will, moral cowardice and general selfishness.

If I am lonely, it was I who drove hearts away.

If I am bitter it was I who skimped the sugar-bowl.

If I am persecuted it was I who brought it on by my cantankerousness.

The loving are beloved.

The generous are helped.

The considerate are considered.

The bully, by and by, is bullied, the smasher, smashed.

And the end of a hog is the slaughter house.

There are no victims of fate. They always rise above tragedy. The noble soul is never more serene than when all creation thinks it has downed him.

ADVANTAGE OF A TWO-SPEED MOWER

Frame of Thomas Crown Two-Speed Mower.
Note That All Wearing Parts are Detachable.

Heavy grass requires that a mower knife move with much greater speed, than when mower is working in very light grass, or is doing the many jobs of light cutting necessary time at the high speed sometimes needed to give power.

Gears Run in Oil.

An Automobile makes use of varying speeds for power purposes. No one would think of running an engine all the on every farm. If the knife moves at fast speed in cutting light grass or weeds wear is excessive.

The Thomas Crown Mower has a two-speed movement of the knife. This feature adds much to the life and good work of the mower.
