Call Sent Out to U. D. C. Chapters
Of interest to the United Daughters of the Confederacy here, is the following from Thursday's Greensboro News:

"The call for the twenty-seventh convention of the North Carolina division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy has been sent to the presidents of the 109 chapters of North Carolina. The convention will meet in Greensboro from October 3 to 6, inclusive, with the O. Henry hotel as convention headquarters. All sessions will be held there.

"The fact that Mrs. L. R. Schuyler, president general of the national Confederacy, comprising chapters from every state in the union will be present and address the convention makes the meeting such that it is attracting widespread attention. Many other prominent women will attend.

"Elaborate plans have been outlined by the executive body of the local chapter for the entertainment of the 100 to 200 delegates expected.

"The officers of the Guilford chapter are Miss Lizzie Lindsay, president; Mrs. R. L. Justice, vice president; Mrs. J. M. Morehead, second vice president; Miss Katherine Chapman, recording secretary; Mrs. J. W. Patterson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. R. Michaux, treasurer; Miss Olyvia Nelson, registrar, and Mrs. Gerland Daniel, general chairman of circles."

Celebrates Seventh Birthday

Master Richard Brewer Howie, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Howie, was seven years old Tuesday, and entertained about eighty of his little friends in honor of the occasion. All kinds of merry games made the hours fly until time to serve ice cream, cake and candy, dear to the hearts of all little boys and girls. Each small guest was given as a favor, a pretty little basket filled with candy to carry away.

Guard's Death Bares Tragedy

Washington, Aug. 22.—Filed with the health department here is the registration of the death of an obscure old man. Embodied in that certificate is a story of tragedy, of unfulfilled romance, of a blighted life—and of more tragedy.

The man was William T. Ayres, for the greater part of his life a guard in the United States Capitol. No one knew of Ayres or his life and no one cared. A grim-faced, white-haired old man, he went silently about his daily duties. No complaints were ever registered against his work, but no one ever took the trouble to look into it. He had no friends, and he made no effort to acquire any.

"Ayres is a silent old man," finally said his superiors at the Capitol. And with that they dismissed him.

Out of work and with no friend to go to, the old man gave up in his final struggle with life, and at the age of 79, succumbed to pneumonia. Then from his home town came the story of his life.

For forty years Ayres had been professor of Latin at DePauw University, Greencastle, Indiana. Of giant intellect, a master in his field, his was the most familiar face on the campus.

But even then, at the height of his career, life to Ayres was an empty shell. Stark tragedy already had seared his heart. During his college days at the same university where he later became one of the most respected members of the faculty, the great Latin scholar became enamored with a beautiful girl attending the school. They became engaged.

Buried in Trousseau

Then, shortly before the wedding day, the girl fell sick and died. She was buried on her wedding day in her bridal trousseau—and Ayres' hopes and dreams were shattered.

Ayres became a recluse. He never married. Several years later he accepted the chair of Latin at DePauw, remaining there for forty years. Ageing even more rapidly than most men, Ayres two years ago came to the final turning point in his life. Too old to teach and without funds, the old man sacrificed his pride in the altar of necessity and appeal to Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, one of his former pupils, for aid.

Senator Watson secured his old teacher a place on the Capitol Guard. There the old man lived out the last two years of his life, guiding sightseers through the building, running errands for irritable young Congressmen and doing the thousand and one onerous odd jobs incident to his position.

If a man is wedded to art, he is apt to find the dowry unsatisfactory.

The Style You Want for Fall

Hart Schaffner & Marx

Clothes have it all

NO matter how stylish a suit is, if it isn't the style you want, you don't want it.

Men's tastes differ; and we take these differences into account when we buy clothes for you

You may prefer the loose, easy model called the "English" type. It isn't very English but it's very smart with that "well dressed" look. Or you may like the snug, soft draped style or the closer fitting models for very young men

You may have definite preferences as to lapels, buttons, the drape of the coat, the cut of the trousers. All these things are included in Style. Young men who know what they want and can describe it; older men who know what they want and can't describe it; men who know what they don't want; all men can find the right style here in
