

Saturday, May 11, 1912, there is a headline reading, 'Circulars Insult Honest Teacher,' over an article referring to campaign literature sent out in advocacy of Hon. Oscar W. Underwood for President; the article was inspired by a letter written to me by a teacher whom you do not name, but whom I have no hesitancy in identifying as Dr. M. C. S. Noble, of Chapel Hill. By the way, it may be interesting to note that the copy of the letter sent me was marked "confidential," but as he has seen fit to give out the text to you I presume that he has no objection to my stating who wrote it. Dr. Noble was irritated because every time Mr. Wilson's name was called in the letter it appeared 'Professor Wilson,' and from this you argue that I have insulted the teachers of the state. I confess I stand amazed, for while I am not a worshipper of the ex-president of Princeton by any means, still I consider him a very able man, and I had no idea it would insult the teachers of the state to class him among them. In fact, I am still of the opinion that you are mistaken; the evidence of your headline to the contrary notwithstanding, I do not believe that there is a teacher in the state of North Carolina who would be aggrieved at the comparison.

Missed, of Course.

(From The Washington Star.)
Joseph H. Choate, at the Three Arts Club benefit at the Republic theater, in New York, told after his witty speech:
Two young girls were drinking tea when a young man passed. As he passed the first girl blushed, displayed a beautiful ring on her white hand and murmured:
"Well, Jack and I am to be married Easter week."
"But," said the other girl, "I thought you had thrown Jack over."
"Oh, so I did," the first replied, "but—but you know how a girl throws."

Definition From Experience.

(From The Cleveland Plain Dealer.)
A Cleveland school teacher writes that she asked her class what was the difference between the expression, "a while" and "a time." Nobody seemed to have any ideas on the subject. Finally the light of intelligence "was seen" to shine in the eyes of one little boy, and the teacher called upon him to save the intellectual honor of the class.
"I knew, teacher," he cried eagerly. "When papa says he's going out for a while, mamma says she knows he's going out for a time."
That's one way of looking at it.

A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet, Ill., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate. "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicine till I used Dr. King's New Discovery. But I owe my life to this wonderful remedy for I scarcely cough at all now." From the Ash Tray.
Even the ash of hubby's cigar can be utilized. Is what way? Why, as a polish for gold watches, bracelets and rings, let alone chains and a multitude of other trinkets. This comes from a prominent jeweler, so it must be nearly correct. He even goes to the extent of carrying with him a small case in which he preserves all the ashes from the cigars which he smokes. He says that the grain is so fine that it leaves no mark that is discernible to the naked eye.

Ready to Meet Emergencies.
"Be systematically heroic in little unnecessary points. Every day do something for no other reason than its difficulty, so that if an hour of need should come, it may find you trained to stand the test. The man who has daily inured himself to habits of concentrated attention, energetic will, and self-denial in unnecessary things, will stand like a tower when everything rocks around him."
—William James.

Throughout the body of the article, you consistently endeavor to give the impression that the Underwood bureau has been sending out circulars abusive of the teaching profession; you never say so straight out, for you know very well that no such circulars have been sent out, but by repeated innuendo and insinuation you strive to give that false impression. For instance, how would the average reader construe this sentence? "Sneers at 'poverty-stricken professors' and like utterances are not relished by the teaching profession of the general public." Nine men out of ten would infer that the Underwood bureau had been sneering at some teacher on account of his poverty, yet you have not said so and you will not say so, for you know that it is not true. The sole time that the expression "poverty-stricken" has been used in Underwood campaign literature is in the following sentence in reference to Mr. Wilson's hundred-thousand-dollar campaign in Wisconsin. "The poverty stricken pedagogue has been carrying on a campaign that would have bankrupted all the rest of them in two months." I will not insult the intelligence of the editor of the News and Observer by suggesting that he is so dull of mind that he has not understood that the sneer is not at Mr. Wilson's poverty, but at his pose.

I would not be understood as accusing the Editor of the News and Observer of dishonesty personally for such a charge would be ridiculous on its face; but I do accuse him of having allowed his enthusiasm for one candidate to carry him far beyond the bonds which a fairminded man should ever allow himself to cross. And I furthermore charge him with using—perhaps unconsciously—the candidacy of Woodrow Wilson as a mask behind which lurks the News and Observer's real candidate—William Jennings Bryan.
