This Is a Mistake

This is a mistake as we expect to be right here with the goods and the price, on time.

Watch this paper for the new arrivals and the date of the opening.

True resignation, which always brings with it the confidence that unchangeable goodness will make even the disappointment of our hopes, and the contradictions of life, conducive to some benefit, casts a grave tranquil light over the prospect of even a toilsome and troubled life.—Humboldt.

A great estate is a great disadvantage to those who do not know how to use it, for nothing is more common than to see wealthy persons live schandulously and miserably; riches do them no service in order to acquire virtue and happiness; therefore 'tis precept and principle, not an estate, that makes a man good for something.—Antonius.

For one swallow does not make spring, not yet one fine day.—Aristotle.

The Home Paper

In the course of his remarks concerning his paper an exchange editor says this paper belongs to you, Mr. and Mrs. Subscriber, just as well as to the publisher. You want it to be a newsy one of course. You can help make it so.

Continuing he says: Every reader should be a reporter, at least to the extent of reporting the news he knows concerning his own family and friends. You perhaps have wondered how we gather so much news for every issue. If every reader would give us the items he knows, we would make it twice as newsy as it now is.

Merely paying for the paper and taking what we give you is not enough. Other readers would be interested in learning the news you know. You'll enjoy seeing it in print yourself. If you do not acquaint us with the items you know of, you cannot find fault the paper for not containing them.

If you think for one minute, right now, several items will come to your mind. What if they are but "personals." We want personals. We want anything that is news.

Take a livelier interest in YOUR paper. You'll appreciate it more as will all of your friends.

One was telling Socrates that such a one was nothing improved by his travels. "I very well believe it," said he, "for he took himself along with him."—Montaigne.

When spring unlocks the flowers to paint the laughing soil.—Bishop Heber.

A Toast.
