NUMBER 21

The Value of "Corn Club Boys."

The average yield of corn in North Carolina for 1914 was 20 bushels per acre. In the same year there were 1,000 boys who were members of the "Boys Corn Club." The average yield per acre for these one thousand boys was 28 bushels. Now we can see at once what these boys did for our State. We see that they made thirty eight bushels per acre more than the average yield for the State, making a total of 38,000 bushels of extra corn. Now what did this 38,000 bushels of corn mean to North Carolina? It meant at least $35,000. Now the average yield of corn per acre for Davie county in 1914 was 22 bushels. Two bushels per acre above the average for the State. This shows that Davie is above the average corn producing counties in the State, and with a little extra attention this yield can be greatly increased. Some counties in North Carolina have more than 200 boys in the "Corn Club" work, now what are these boys meaning to their counties? These counties have corn shows each year and offer different prizes under different conditions, and this is one of the ways in which the boys are kept interested. The value of this "club work" is great, it broadens the vision of the boys, and inspires them to do greater things along the lines of agriculture, as well as other industrial pursuits of life. Now why should Davie, with her natural advantages, as already stated, have only ten boys in the "Corn Club" work? I believe that I am safe in saying that these boys will make this year at least 30 bushels per acre, more than the average yield for the county. Now what is such work meaning to our county? And what would our county be in a few years if we only had more "Corn Club" boys to increase the yield of corn and also increase the interest of the people in the surrounding community? The following is the names of the boys who are members of the "Corn Club" in Davie, and these boys should be highly honored and praised for the good which they are doing. Namely: Hubert Boger, Orrell Echison, Ovid Foot, Daniel Foster, Phillip Hendricks, Fred Leagons, R. Sheets, Prichard White, Frank Woodard, Julius Woodard. Now next year let's make this number at least fifty.

J. WADE HENDRICKS.

He Had The Price.

Mayor Mitchell, of New York, upon the revival of business underwent an operation for appendicitis this week. The Mayor is young yet and this accounts for having postponed the fashionable operation so long. We only now and then hear of these operations. The poor white man and the nigger must go through life without enjoying the sensation of losing the appendix because we haven't the price. But after awhile, when the high cost of living reaches a lower level perhaps it will be for us all to enjoy the operations.—Fair brother's Everything.

A MERCILESS JUDGE

One Who Shows No Favor. A merciless judge is Father Time. Before him the weak and the wanting go to the wall. Only the truth can stand. For years the following statement from a Salisbury resident has withstood this sternest of all tests.

John W. Glover, shoe repairer, 130 N. Main St., Salisbury, N. C., says: "I suffered severely from backache and pains across my loins. I couldn't get out of bed. Doan's Kidney Pills stopped the pain in my back and I was soon well." (Statement given January 6th, 1908.)

On March 10th, 1915, Mr. Glover added: "I haven't had to take Doan's Kidney Pills for a long time."

Fools Not All Dead.

Everything. Several ways there are of getting into print, and one of the ways is to make a fool of yourself—do something odd or eccentric and get a reporter on a yellow journal to play you up as having done a stunt altogether original and quite beyond the imagination of sane and sober folk who do the worth while things in a world where the freak always gets the front page.

Just now a couple up in Maine—a man and his wife—are attempting to demonstrate that they can live and be happy under conditions confronting no man or woman since the time of Adam and his introduction into the garden of Eden. Even the primal state of the First Man had advantages over that of the Maine adventurers, since, according to tradition the garden in which the father of the race found himself was located in a mild climate and filled with fruits which he was at liberty to pluck and eat.

Not so with the Adam and Eve of the modern story, appearing with stock pictures in freak pages of the more or less sensational dailies. These proposed to go into the Maine woods, in the bleak and cheerless month of November with only the wearing apparel brought with them into the world at the time of their birth; with no food or appliances of any kind whatever known to civilization, and prove beyond question of doubt that they could provide clothes, food and shelter, the same as primal man, could live and grow fat without assistance from the outside, depending solely on their own wits and the resources of the great forest in which they have elected to try their daring experiment.

And if reports are to be believed they are doing it. They confess to feeling a little bit breezy in their improvised costumes of leaves strung together on a foundation of bark, and have had recourse to deer skin coats made from the hide of an animal caught in a dead fall. They are also getting up an appetite for bread like their mothers made, rather than the hard tack compounded of blood and roots.

But great is ambition and the desire for fame! Mr. and Mrs. Estes—that is the name if they live to get back to civilization—will doubtless show up in the movies as the originals in the Eden story and a wondering world will gaze in awe and admiration as it puts up its coin for the latest.

An Old-Time Railroad Story.

The relation of old time railroad stories has developed the existence of another amusing tale in Texas. During the Civil War, it is said, a line known as the Memphis, El Paso & Pacific was operated between Marshall, Tex., and Shreveport, La. Three box cars constituted its supply of rolling stock, while the motive power was several yokes of oxen, which were referred to as "hay burners." There was a long grade out of Marshall, and when a "train" was loaded a yoke of oxen were put in the foremost box car and that the cars were permitted to coast down the grade until they reached the bottom of the incline, when the cattle were set to work to haul the equipment over the next summit. Then they again got aboard and the train rolled down the next grade. This sort of thing was repeated until the end of the line was reached. It is said that the road was profitable. Buckling on The Armor.

The Republicans have taken the aggressive in North Carolina politics and have blazed the way up to holding of a State Convention. They will depend very largely on National issues to help them out in the State campaign and while they except to make the State management more of less of prominence in their literature and oratory, the tariff will be their main dependence. The State issue will be a losing one for them. The amount of trouble they may put the Democrats to will depend on the character of the man they may nominate to lead the ticket as gubernatorial candidate. The Republican party will next year be in position to give the Democratic party the most serious fight that has marked any campaign since 1876. The Republicans will have better newspaper backing and they will present a more united front than in any previous campaign, and they will have their ablest men on the stump. And of these the Republicans have a good supply. The Observer still believes that the Democrats will carry every congressional district except one and it has not the slightest doubt of the success of the State ticket, but those who may be thinking that this is going to be accomplished without the most vigorous sort of a campaign, are storing up quite a lot of disillusionment.—Charlotte Observer (Democratic.)

Roosevelt's Grievance.

When Colonel Roosevelt was the guest of the Kaiser on his way home from Africa a grand review of German troops was arranged for him. He was given the finest mount in the imperial stables, and as he reviewed the troops with the Emperor a photograph was taken of them. In one of these photographs Colonel Roosevelt had taken the attitude of pointing out something to the Emperor. Shortly after Roosevelt's return to the United States he found one of the pictures in his mail and written on the lower margin in the handwriting of the Emperor were the words: "Here is where a lieutenant colonel of a cowboy regiment in America was telling the German Emperor how he should run the finest army in the world."—Ex.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. Why You Should Use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Because it has an established reputation won by its good works. Because it is most esteemed by those who have used it for many years, as occasion required, and are best acquainted with its good qualities. Because it loosens and relieves a cold and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. Because it does not contain opium or any other narcotic. Because it is within the reach of all. It only costs a cent. Obtainable everywhere.

The Print Shop Towel.

Everything. The printing office towel is born with the complexion of the lily and the freshness of the rose—it is hung in pristine purity from a roller that seldom revolves—it shakes hand with best fellows and the wisest of men—it comes to be populated by enough germs to entitle it to protection by the society with the long name—it loses its complexion and chaste purpose—a residuum of lye from the yellowest of soap eats out conscience and its hope—its flexibility vanishes like the editor's scissors and the foreman's pipe—it may be rolled up like a carpet and will stand in the corner like an umbrella, but it is dear to the heart of every printer, for its damp acquaintance is the last rite that marks to his departure to the realm of food and likker.

Where It Would End.

Whether or not it prove true that the President now leans toward restoration of the Tariff on wool as well as the Tariff on sugar, the New York Herald is right in saying: If there is to be a Tariff on wool there must be a new Tariff on woolsens and the whole schedule must be revised. The instant that is done there will be no means of stopping a wide ripping up of the whole Tariff question. Who could prophesy where it would end? Well, why not rip up the whole Tariff question? That is what the country wants, and the country will get it, too; if not at the hands of the present Gree Trade administration and Congress, then at the hands of the Protection administration and Congress to be elected next year. That's where it would end.—American Economist.

He's In A Wreck.

"We stand squarely upon the Baltimore platform," declared W. J. Bryan at San Francisco. Remember the promises in that platform? Eliminate the high cost of living. Bust the trusts by reducing the tariff. No Panama canal tolls for American coastwise ships. Protection of life and property of Americans residing abroad. Economy in public expenditures. If Mr. Bryan is standing on that platform he is in the midst of a lot of very badly smashed pieces of political timber.—Union Republican.
