NUMBER 13

A GREAT SPEECH.

Circus Tent Crowd Hears Roosevelt In Attacks On Wilson.

Battle Creek, Mich., Sept. 30.—Speaking to an audience which filled a huge circus tent here this afternoon, Theodore Roosevelt assailed the administrative record of President Wilson and urged the election of Charles E. Hughes.

When the former President entered the tent he was given a wild ovation. Climbing on a table on the speaker's platform, the Colonel read his prepared address, which was devoted almost entirely to an attack on President Wilson's foreign and Mexican politics and the latter's support of the Adamson eight-hour day bill.

Colonel Roosevelt declared that President Wilson's chief policy was the policy of vaccination. He declared the President, in "fifteen messages, letters and speeches," made from December 9, 1914, to February 10, 1916, "took 41 different positions about preparedness and the measures necessary to secure it, and each of these 41 positions, contradicted from one to six of the others."

The European policy of President Wilson was referred to as "humiliating and ignoble."

The Colonel referred to the torpedoing of the Lusitania by a German submarine, as "the most colossal single instance of the murder of non-combatants, including men, women and children that had been perpetrated by any power calling itself civilized, for more than a century."

"I have been asked what I would have done if I had been President when the Lusitania was torpedoed," shouted the speaker. "I would instantly have taken possession of every German ship interned in this country and then I would have said: 'Now, we will discuss not what we will take but what we will give but what we will give back.'"

This utterance received wild applause.

"Mexico offers the most striking instance of contrast between words and deeds on the part of our government," he said. "Mr. Wilson speaks loftily on behalf of 'oppressed men and pitiful women' in the abstract; but when the forces of Carranza and Villa murdered American men, and outraged American women under the direct authority of their leaders, Mr. Wilson made no affective protest of any kind; and in his speech of acceptance he has actually apologized for these men on the ground that they 'represented at least the three passions of reconstruction which lies at the very heart of liberty.' It is difficult to speak objectively of such an utterance, when we remember the infamy which it covers, and the abject submission to infamy or which it seeks to apologize."

Discussing the Adamson bill, Colonel Roosevelt charged that President Wilson, in urging passage of the measure by Congress, took his orders from that one of the parties which he most feared."

"President Wilson says that he is interested in the fortunes of pitiful women and children," the Colonel said. "On the Lusitania there were drowned 103 babies under two years of age; fifty of them being babies under one year of age. How did Mr. Wilson's interest in these pitiful women and children show itself? It showed itself by the statement just two days later about being 'Too proud to fight.' It showed itself in his statement a little over two weeks later to the effect that it was inexpedient then to arouse the spirit of patriotism."

"Let him square these acts with these words of his. Let him square these words with his professions of 'interest' in the fortunes of 'pitiful women and children.' Let him square his absolute failure to take any action whatever with his statements that any 'nation that violates our essential rights must be checked and called to account by direct challenge and resistance. Never in our history has there been such ignoble contrast between the words and the deeds of a chief executive.'"

The Mexican record of the executive was called "ruinous to Mexico, dishonorable to ourselves and infamous from the standpoint of humanity."

"The question at issue was not that of an eight hour day at all. The question was whether the President and Congress should enact a law, without investigation and without knowledge, to give increased wages to a certain portion of the body of wage earners. The labor leaders on this issue, without regard to the right or wrong of the matter, first coerced the President, and then with his aid coerced Congress. The question at issue was not one of the hours of labor. It was one of wages. And it was settled by the President and Congress without investigation and without knowledge. The settlement was due partly to fear, and partly to hope of political profit. President Wilson in his speech on the 23rd of this month sought to explain and justify his action."

"He stated his whole case with probably unconscious accuracy when he said before he undertook to settle the controversy he had learned that the whole temper of the legislative bodies of the United States was in favor of what one side announced to be its contention. In other words, he had made up his mind in advance, and he had made it up because he believed the majority of the Congressmen (for the most part pure politicians) were on what they deemed to be the popular side. In this speech he explicitly admitted that in this controversy the main partner was left out of the reckoning because the two parties declined to consider 'what rights had the hundred million people of the United States?' And President Wilson eagerly joined with these men in refusing to consider the rights of these hundred millions of people."

"President Wilson knows that he has betrayed the rights of these people. He admits that when in the same speech, with his usual faculty for using fine words about the future when he desires to cover up mean deeds in the present, he says, 'how are we going to prevent any organization from overriding the interests of society?' America has the privilege to say: You must not interrupt the National life without consulting us! Exactly! Fine words! Words such as Mr. Wilson loves to use. And as is customary with Mr. Wilson, these fine words of his about abstract rights are flatly contradicted by his unworthy deeds as soon as the concrete case arises."

"Mr. Wilson uses these lofty words about the future at the very time when he has made America submit to seeing 'an organization override the interests of society,' when by his action he has permitted this organization to 'interrupt the National life without consulting us.' Of course it is a mere pretense to say that there is any sacred social reason why there is any greater reason to refuse to arbitrate the number of hours of labor than to refuse to arbitrate the amount of wages. And the question really at issue in this case does not really refer to the number of hours of labor. It refers really to the rate of wages. What Mr. Wilson really did was to insist on legislation about the wage scale without any previous investigation or knowledge. "Let President Wilson apply that sacred eight hour day law to the servants in the White House and see how far he'll get," said Colonel Roosevelt.

Colonel Roosevelt closed his address with a plea for the election of Charles E. Hughes. He urged the voters to "repudiate Mr. Wilson because only by so doing, can they save America from that taint of gross selfishness and cowardice which we owe to Mr. Wilson's substitutions of adroit elocution for straightforward action."

How Come?

The news story printed promiscuously to the effect that ex Judge Cooke, of Asheville, was arrested for having in his possession nine gallons of whiskey and released as not guilty of violating the State law, because he purchased the whiskey for his own use, causes us to wonder just how this can be possible. As we understand the law having in ones possession a greater amount of whiskey than one gallon is prima facie evidence that the holder of the joyous fluid is a retailer. If an ex-Judge can safely house nine gallons of it, and by swearing it is for his own use, why can't any other common mortal, white man or black man, do the same thing with impunity?

If the law works only with the suspect, then what is to hinder men not suspects from dealing in the poison for gain? The story is that a whole trunk full came into Asheville for the ex-Judge; that the policeman saw it and arrested the judge, and all he had to do was to go on the witness stand and swear it was for his own use, and the incident was closed.

How Catarrh is Contracted.

Mothers are sometimes so thoughtless to neglect the colds which their children contract. The inflammation of the mucus membrane, at first acute, becomes chronic and the child has chronic catarrh, a disease that is seldom cured and that may prove a life's burden. Many persons who have this loathsome disease will remember having had frequent colds at the time it was contracted. A little forethought, a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy judiciously used, and all this trouble might have been avoided. Obtainable everywhere.

Children in Junior Orphanage.

There are 65 little Tar Heels who have gone over the mountain range across which many of their relatives went to find new homes in the northwest. These 65 are in Tiffin, Ohio, in the national home for orphaned children, established by the Junior Order of American Mechanics. North Carolina stands third in the list of states of the union in regard to number of orphans who are getting the benefit of the training of this institution which is recognized as one of the best in the country—one consecrated to loving care of the helpless children of deceased members of the great order that pays for its support.

This state has some claim in point of numbers for representation there, for the Juniors are 40,000 strong in North Carolina.

The American, a Pittsburgh, Pa., publication, the official organ of the order, recently carried a lengthy account of the home and devoted a lot of space to North Carolina children. It carried the names of the children from this state, and at that time they numbered 55. Since then 10 others have been carried to the home.

Mule Used As Proof.

Shaving is not labor, but a necessity, and the State has no right to deny a man the privilege granted a mule, according to a brief filed in the State Superior Court at Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 14th, by attorneys for a Daveport, Ia., barber, arrested on complaint of the Barber's Union, for keeping his shop open Sunday. "If a man can curry a mule on Sunday, he has a right to have his own head curried in a manner of speaking," says the brief.

Unique Charlotte Negro.

The Observer has found a 113 year-old negro at Charlotte by the name of Wesley Jones, who despite his years, a veteran of 13 wives and the father of 68 children, is still able to do light work. He was born August 14, 1803, on the ancestral plantation of the Ford, family, on Sullivan's Island, near Charleston, S. C., and it is safe to say that there is no one living who can personal disclaim his advent into this world of sin and sorrow.

UNSHAKEN TESTIMONY

It was very severe for a time, but finally went away, only to return only several months later; I finally became convinced that my kidneys were affected. I had dull headaches and felt miserable. Two or three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me." (Statement given December 27, 1907.)

OVER SIX YEARS LATER. Mrs. Shaw said: "I hold as high an opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills today as ever. They never fail to do me good when I take them."
