IF YOU WERE MINE.
If you were mine, how fair the day and fleet—
How swift the night and sweet,
Till soft sunshine
Would make us glad anew and life complete.
If you were mine!
Of love of friends, of hope of Heaven forlorn,
Their loss I'll laugh to scorn
And not repine!
I must be glad though heaven and earth should mourn.
Weary the waiting is for stolen hours,
Though sweet forbidden flowers—
Ah! give love's sign,
And come! for, darling, love, life, all we ours,
If you were mine!

THE ARIZONA "KICKER."

A Few of the Vexations Which Beset a Frontier Editor.

The following extracts are taken from the last issue of the Arizona Kicker:
"TEN THOUSAND REWARD.—On Tuesday night of last week, as we were preparing to go to bed after a hard evening's work, some murderous wretch hurled a brick through the only window in our office. It was intended for our destruction, but that Providence which watches over an editor as well as a sparrow willed otherwise. It struck and knocked our bedstead to pieces, pried three dead ads on the stone, and glanced off and ripped up several feet of flooring, but left our person untouched. We were out of the office inside of ten minutes, but the blood-thirsty fiend had made good his escape.
"We have been warned that we must go, and this is the seventh emphatic hint to stir our stumps, but here we squat. We don't vacate. We don't scare. We don't change our editorial course one iota. We hereby offer $10,000 reward for information that will lead to the capture of the dastard who attempted to assassinate us, and hereafter we warn the public that we shall sleep with a double-barrelled shotgun across the foot of the bed. Any one coming to the office at a late hour to ask us to play a game of poker should stop at Scott's corner and whistle four times as a signal."

"CORRECTION.—Last week we had a brief item to the effect that Major Hornback, our efficient Register of Deeds, had got staving drunk, destroyed a bushel or two of valuable papers, had two fights, and then gone home to smash his cookstove and lick his wife. Next day Major Hornback called at this office and not only subscribed for two copies to friends in the East, paying us $6 in cash. "We therefore desire to correct the item of last week. The Major was not drunk. It was simply an attack of vertigo, to which he is subject. He was never drunk in his life, and a more efficient public official or a kinder husband and father cannot be found on the face of the globe. We shall make other corrections from time to time as the victims come in and subscribe."

"SPECIMEN VENOM.—This week we nail the lie set afloat last week by some of the venomous serpents on Jackson Hill to the effect that we had been refused credit at Booker's saloon. No event of the sort ever occurred, and the story was set afloat to injure our commercial standing in Chicago. It was a lie made out of whole cloth, and as soon as we can locate the liar he'll be made to believe that a double two-story house fell upon him."

"REVENGE.—Two weeks ago we had the pleasure of showing Steve Battle up to this community in his true light—that of a jail-breaker, incendiary and robber. In revenge Steve waited for us in front of the Widow Chilton's house the other night, where it is well known we are doing a little courting with a view to matrimony, and as we reached the road he made a rush for us, crying out that he would have our life. We were taken unawares, knocked down and pounded until we couldn't holler. As a result Steve Battle has been run out of this town with a rail beneath him, and warned that he will be hung if he returns. We are able to be about again, and return our thanks to such friends as have sent in flowers, sausages, butter, crackers, codfish and other mementoes. We expected a dozen wallpings the first year of our stay, and will probably get 'em, as we have averaged one a month so far. The worm will turn some day, however, and then look out."

NEEDS OF THE NATION.

Who is Injured by Protection? Senator Vance in Baltimore Sun.

It will not be denied that in fixing the policy of a country, those measures should be proffered which will confer the greatest good on the greatest number. In our country it has become a maxim, a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance. It simply means that the general interest must override the particular interest of individuals. It by no means implies a sacrifice of individual interests, for, as M. Bastiat says, an essential element of each man's prosperity is the general prosperity. Therefore, whilst each one is more or less benefited by the general welfare, it is not true that the general welfare is to the same extent promoted by the advancement of a few. In short, the prosperity of nine men is of more value to the tenth man than the prosperity of the tenth man would be to the nine. The maxim is too obvious to doubt and to humane to assail. In our legislation, then, we should unquestionably be guided by it, and ask, first of all, what is the general interest and how can it be best promoted?

The first grand division of our people, or any other, is into producers and consumers. This division has reference to tariff taxation, for, in the general sense, all human beings are consumers. So, in one sense, all the 17,000,000 of persons put down in the census as engaged in gainful occupations are producers, or doing work which assists production. But we are to consider only those who are engaged in the production of articles which are "protected" from competition by tariff duties. Farmers and those engaged in all branches of agriculture are producers, with slight exceptions none of their products are protected or can in any way be increased in price by the imposition of tariff duties. So of builders, of those engaged in transportation, personal service and all the rest of the vast army of toilers—none are protected. The direct recipients of the benefits of tariff legislation are whittled down to those engaged in creating manufactured products alone. It is not necessary to claim as in fairness I might, that it should be further cut down to the factory owners, excluding the operatives.

Putting into the count all persons employed in manufacturing, the case stands thus: That we legislate for some two and a half millions of producers, and against some fifteen millions of men who are both consumers and producers, or, counting the entire population, our laws are made for the interest of less than ten millions, and against the interest of more than fifty millions of our people! The conclusion is unavoidable that the major interest is that of the consumer, whilst that of the producer is the minor, and therefore tariff laws are for the benefit of the few, and are hostile to the great majority.

Who is injured by protection? To this question it may be answered, every one who is not benefited.

Protection can only benefit anybody, as has been shown, by increasing the prices of those things which they have to sell. Now, if it increased likewise the price of that which they had to buy, the one would set off the other, and there would be no benefit at all. Surely this is self-evident. To make protection a benefit to somebody, therefore, it must, in the necessity of things, either increase the price of their products, leaving the price of their purchases the same, or it must maintain the price of their sales and lower that of their purchases. If it does neither it does nothing; if it does either it injures somebody. Every man, therefore, in the United States is injured who, having (by protection) the cost raised of all which he has to buy, does not also, by the same law, have the price of all that he has to sell increased to the same extent. First and foremost, then, it injures all who only consume and do not produce. As they have nothing to sell, but all their transactions are purchase, it is impossible to compensate them for their losses by the increase in prices. This large class includes the professions, merchants, all persons engaged in transportation, personal and government service, women, orphan children, and all who live on fixed incomes, and the like. Perhaps, however, their injury is not so great as that done to the farmers and planters, for though the expenditure of the first named is increased by protection, their incomes are not necessarily diminished. But with the farmer both are done. The price of his purchases is increased, and being compelled to sell his surplus products in the markets of nations who cannot exchange with us on equal terms, the prices are necessarily lowered and his income is thereby lessened. He is wasting at both the spigot and the spile. There is no proposition more obviously just than that when the farmer is forced to send for sale his wheat, his meat and his cotton to Europe, when the price is fixed for him by the competition of the world, he should be permitted to buy his supplies of wool and iron and the like in the self-same markets at prices regulated by the same competition.

STATE NEWS.

Gleanings from Our State Exchanges.

Minister Jarvis will return to North Carolina in July.

Jeff Davis was 80 years old last Sunday. He is about to outlive all his traducers.

As a result of the high license system the number of saloons in Philadelphia has been reduced more than 4,500.

The United States Fish Commission recently distributed 1,000,000 young shad in the Catawba river. Other streams are also being stocked.

The Supreme Court has decided a very curious case. A woman murdered her husband and was sent to the penitentiary—she sued for dower out of the estate—the Court granted her claim for dower.

John E. Brady, Ph. D., will be one of the instructors in the Newton normal this summer. The Newton Enterprise says he has accepted a permanent position in Smith Female College, Northampton, Mass.

The trustees of the Holy Trinity church, New York city, have been tried on the charge of importing "foreign contract labor" in that they called their new rector, Rev. Warren, from England, and have been convicted and fined $1,000.

Joe James, a young planter of Darlington, county, S. C., has been arrested charged with hiring two negroes to kill his father, who was assassinated some weeks ago. He wanted the old man out of the way so he could get his property.

Rev. N. H. D. Wilson, Jr., son of the late Rev. N. H. D. Wilson, of the North Carolina Conference, and who for a year past has been studying for the ministry at Vanderbilt University, has accepted a position on the Raleigh Christian Advocate.

Mrs. Hattie Marshall, a fashionable dressmaker, died under very painful circumstances at Jacksonville, Florida, Wednesday. A few days ago a pimple appeared on her nose, and she pricked it with a pin. The pimple, after this treatment, began to swell, and she expired in great pain from blood poisoning.

The Supreme Court holds that an Administrator who at his own sale of land to make assets, collusively purchases the land himself, and sells it at an advance, is liable to the estate of his intestate for the full amount for which he sold the land, even if it be in excess of its value, for he shall not be allowed to make any profit by his collusion.

Judges Shepherd and Avery.

Raleigh News and Observer.

There is a peculiar propriety in the nomination of Judges Shepherd and Avery to be associate justices of the Supreme Court in case the proposed constitutional amendment providing for two additional members of the court shall be ratified by the people. The two gentlemen admirably represent respectively the east and the west and both have the utmost confidence of the people of the whole State in all respects touching ability, uprightness and incorruptibility. Both gentlemen have served the people faithfully and well on the Superior Court bench, winning golden opinions for themselves everywhere. They are both gentlemen of marked capacity, of the highest character, of great dignity; and both are learned in the law. During the years they have already served as judges they have been singularly free from even the breath of calumny, from the faintest suspicion of unfairness in any case. They have held the scales of justice balanced with exactness and these qualities, the possession of which they have already proven, will continue to characterize them in the loftier place for which they have been chosen by the Democracy, should they be elected. They are both strong, well-furnished, eminently fit men, and the addition of their recognized capacity to the learning and diligence and faithful performance of duty which they have already upon the Supreme Court bench would lighten greatly the burden of labor now imposed upon that tribunal, a burden which is generally admitted to be too great now for the present strength of the court. Three Supreme Court Judges were enough for North Carolina before the war, but the State has grown immensely since then and the volume of litigation has increased accordingly. The convention in nominating Judges Shepherd and Avery did wisely and well, and its action will be ratified by the people in November by an increased Democratic majority, we have no doubt.
