THANKSGIVING.

THE PRESIDENT ISSUES HIS PROCLAMATION.

NOVEMBER 29

The Gifts and Graces Received from Providence.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 1.—The President this afternoon issued the following proclamation:

Constant thanksgiving and gratitude are due from the American people to Almighty God for his goodness and mercy, which have followed them since the day he made them a nation, and vouchsafed to them a free government. With loving kindness he has constantly led us in the way of prosperity and greatness.

He has not visited with swift punishment our short comings, but with gracious care he has warned us of our dependence upon his forbearance and has taught us that obedience to his holy law is the price of a continuance of his precious gift.

In acknowledgement of all that God has done for us as a nation, and to the end that, on an appointed day, the united prayers and praise of a grateful country may reach the throne of grace, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the twenty-ninth day of November instant as a day of thanksgiving and praise, to be kept and observed throughout the land. On this day, let all our people suspend their ordinary work and occupations; and in their accustomed places of worship, with prayer and songs of praise, render thanks to God for all his mercies—for the abundant harvests, which have rewarded the toil of the husbandman during the year that has passed, and for the rich rewards that have followed the labors of our people in their shops and their marts of trade and traffic. Let us give thanks for peace and for social order and contentment within our borders, and for our advancement in all that adds to national greatness.

And, mindful of the afflictive dispensation with which a portion of our land has been visited, let us, while we humble ourselves before the power of God, acknowledge his mercy in setting bounds to the deadly march of pestilence, and let our hearts be chastened by sympathy with our fellow countrymen who have suffered and who mourn.

And as we return thanks for all the mercies which we have received from the hands of our Heavenly Father, let us not forget that He has enjoined upon us charity; and on this Day of Thanksgiving let us generously remember the poor and the needy, so that our tribute of praise and gratitude may be acceptable in the sight of the Lord.

Done at the city of Washington, on the first day of November, Eighteen hundred and Eighty-eight, and in the year of Independence of the United States, the one hundredth and thirteenth.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto signed my name [SEAL] and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

By the President, T. F. BAYARD, Sec'y of State.

Worth Knowing.

Mr. W. H. Morgan, merchant, Lake City, Fla., was taken with a severe cold, attended with a distressing cough and running into consumption in its first stages. He tried many so-called popular cough remedies and steadily grew worse. Was reduced in flesh, had difficulty in breathing and was unable to sleep. Finally tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and found immediate relief, and after using about a half dozen bottles found himself well and had no return of the disease. No other remedy can show so grand a record of cures, as Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption Guaranteed to do just what is claimed for it.—Trial bottle free at Tull's Drug Store.

Mr. A. K. Seago writes: Send me a dozen bottles Huckleberry Cordial for some afflicted children at the orphan's home. Have used it with so much success in my family, know what it will do.

Babies are too highly prized to permit them to suffer with colic, flatulence, etc., when Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup will at once relieve them. Price 25 cents.

A purely vegetable, but most efficacious purgative is offered to the public in Laxador. For sale by all druggists. Price only 25 cents.

A Mountain Trip.

Correspondence of the Morganton Star.

My long looked for visit to the mountains and the Linville Falls, was taken last Monday, the 29 Oct., 1888. In company with my pilot, Mr. Joseph B. Hunter, we left his home on Linville river at 7 1/2 A. M., and made our way slowly up the mountain road, and at Jumping Off place, I got my first view of the surrounding country from a high point. We then made our way to the top of the Pinnacle, where I hitched my faithful "Morgan" to a saplin, and he tied his uniting mule, Nell, to another, and then we climbed the rocks to the highest point. This being my first experience in the mountains, I felt high up. Here was a scene beyond description, wherever the eye could reach, at any point of the compass, were hills and hills, mountains and mountains. The sun was shining in all his glory, and the winding, restless, Linville shown like a sheet of silver; upon its bosom seeming myriads of diamonds glittered in the sunlight. The mist from earth hid many points from us, not even Morganton could be seen. Every prominent mountain was before us; Table Rock from where we stood, looked unnatural; instead of being flat and broad, it assumed a conical shape not unlike a cypress knee in our eastern swamps; then the Hawk's Bill; and near us the Short Off—the Indians "Escola."

We mounted our steeds again, and proceeded up the Cranberry road, and, by chance, we saw Shook's Rock House, now known as "Turtle Head Rock," from its very near resemblance to the stretched out turtle's head as if in the act of crawling over the mountain side to destruction below.

Along this route the before mentioned mountains were more distinct, and nearer, and more natural, and grander and captivating.

Riding on, we climbed up to the top of Clary's Peak, the highest point on Dog-Back, and the highest peak of the Linville range. Here we stopped awhile to take in another and further view of the country; and like the man from Mitchell, we thought if the world was as big the other way as from where we saw it on that lofty eminence, it was certainly a big world. We were now at about our nearest point to the Table et als. Hawk's Bill like a pile of sheet rocks towered high; these sheets of rocks were laid apparently, like scales on a fish, but in reverse order. Here were the Chimneys in plain view; further to the north was the Ginger Cake more like a vulture lazily resting after a sumptuous feast. All these points were in view along the major part of the trip.

Riding down the other side of Clary's Peak to Low Gap, we saw a veritable pond of water, reminding us of Pasquotank where bullfrogs jump from bank to bank, and yell their hideous yank-o-yank.

Going up Chestnut Knob, we turned out to a fine, bold spring, the head of Laurel Branch; here we stopped for refreshments.

Remounting our animals, we rode over the top of Little Chestnut Knob to the end of Locust Thicket: turning out to the left we obtained a fine view of North Cove a fertile valley low down between the mountains.

Again to the road down to Bynum's Bluff, a wild but sublime scene; awful and dangerous, yet possessing a magnetic charm; like some vast uncompleted, ancient structure whose walls of several hundred feet have been laid bare to the beating storms of ages, its floor filled with accumulations of time, nature has beautifully moulded, covered with green foliage; and through the centre rolls the tireless Linville, dancing and sparkling, winding its way swells in volume and power to mingle its waters with the Big Catawba. A mile and a half further on we turned down the path that leads us to the Falls. The calvary dismounted, hitched, and footed it up the rocky paths. The roaring of the Falls gave me the fidgets, and the eagerness to see them grew as we drew near the foaming water. We climbed up, and climbed down, and climbed under the thick growth, on narrow foot holds in the rocks, and we emerged from this to a point above the falls, where setting upon a broad thin rock I viewed the Boiling Pot, foaming, boiling, leaping, rushing onward. Down again, bowing, crouching, pulling ourselves up, and easing down, we came in full view of the indescribable scene; almost speechless we drank in and digested as much as we could, occasionally venturing to say grand! The mighty Linville rushed over the sixty or seventy feet of precipice into the basin below. Back by the same route we came to the top where we viewed the upper part. The water came quietly, and lazily from around the bend of the river, until it drifted over the first short fall, when, as if maddened by the sudden interruption, it rushed furiously to the pot, thence rising, white with rage, it swept its mighty torrent into the cove below, and then as if satisfied that it had accomplished a purpose, it passed quietly and peacefully on, rippling and rejoicing in its freedom.

Going back to our horses, we retraced the path to the road, to Rattlesnake Springs, the Itasca of the North Fork river; thence by the road leading to the North Cove by way of the Winding Stairs. At the head of the stairs we dismounted and walked, leading our horses down the narrow and steep winding path a half mile or more. We again struck the North Fork in Cedar Cove, and after crossing and recrossing it many times we came into the North Cove. This is a beautiful valley with fine farms, and thickly settled. At the head of this Cove it is quite narrow, but widens out as we proceed. We arrived at the home of Mr. Romulus Brown, and being invited to spend the night, we alighted, and spent the time pleasantly with this kind and hospitable family.

Leaving there early next morning the 30, we recrossed the Fork and rode up Linville mountain and took another view of the beautiful scenery, here we noticed particularly the western mountains, Mitchell's, and Clingman's, Peaks, Little Yellow, and Big Yellow, mountains. Leaving these, we came down to the starting point, where we rested, and talked over all we had seen. And here it is, about the best I can give you.

In the Prospectus

which we received recently from the Youth's Companion office, we notice an array of noted Contributors which promises unusual excellence for the coming Volume. First among them is the Right Honorable W. E. Gladstone, affectionately called the "Grand Old Man," the greatest of living statesmen, who writes on "The Future of the English-Speaking Races." Then General Lord Wolseley, who will tell of his strange personal adventures in the field with the British armies. Then Professor Tyndall, and Justin McCarthy, who writes of "Leaders in the House of Lords." Archdeacon Farrar, on "Musicians and Their Struggles," and Professor Huxley. Among American Contributors we find such well-known names as Lieutenant Schwatka, who writes "Tight Pinches in the Arctic," Andrew Carnegie, on "Bits of Advice to Young Men," Dr. Austin Flint, Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., on "Young Men in the Law," Admiral Luce, Colonel Thomas W. Knox, James Parton and at least one hundred others.

The Companion is a welcome visitor weekly in more than 400,000 families, and has won a place in home life obtained by no other publication. The wonder is how any family can do without it. The publishers announce that any new subscriber who sends $1.75 now, can have the Companion free every week to January 1, 1889, and for a full year from that date.

Renews Her Youth.

Mrs. Phebe Chesley, Peterson, Clay Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouchsafed for by the residents of the town: "I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and am able to do all my own household work. I owe my thanks to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and removed completely all disease and pain."—Try a bottle, 50c. and $1. at Tull's Drug Store.

Nothing More Dangerous

"Than a neglected cough," is what Dr. J. F. Hammond, professor in the Electric Medical College, says, "and as a preventive remedy and a curative agent." I cheerfully recommend Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein.

A friend induced me to try Salvation Oil for my rheumatic foot, I used it and the rheumatism is entirely gone. JOHN H. ANDERSON, Baltimore, Md.
