Boys, I am coming slowly but surely.

President Garfield started as a cart driver on a canal; President Lincoln started by splitting three thousand rails per day; Senator Pritchard, a few years ago, went to Bakersville, N. C., a homeless boy, with only ten cents in his pocket; Cobb started at the bottom of the ladder a short time ago, competing with the merchant princes of our town, but a few more lifts from his friends will place him on a level if not in the lead.

Call at the same old stand—Hogan corner.
