Hypnotism and its Perils.

It is noticed with no small degree of satisfaction, says the Washington Times, that the press of the country is calling attention to the danger that lies in the indiscriminate practice of hypnotism, to regard the hypnotist simply as a slight of hand performer and the exhibition of his power as merely a clever trick is not only foolish but an evidence of inexcusable ignorance. There is nothing new about it, of course. It has been practised under various appellations in past times and by more or less prominent people. It has been made use of by scientists as well as by mountebanks, just as it is today. Mesmer and Cagliostro were its exponents in the latter part of the last century and the beginning of this. Eminent psychiatrists of Germany, France, Switzerland and the United States have engaged in the study and practice of it for entirely proper and humane purposes in our day, but at the same time it is made the means of money making by men who mist and are mist by the ignorant and the Heliars and Kellers as entertainers only.

Right here lies the danger. A faculty, a power capable of producing such excellent results, as can be secured through hypnotism in the treatment of certain nervous diseases, but which also may be employed for the accomplishment of crime, should no longer be deemed beneath the notice of lawmakers. For instance nearly every hypnotist going about the country giving performances assures his audience that the hypnotic sleep or condition has absolutely no bad effect upon the subject, but is rather beneficial than otherwise. On the other hand, there are eminent physicians who assert that every time a man submits himself to the hypnotic influence, he is injured mentally. A New England practitioner of distinction declares that a person who makes a business of being hypnotized, and continues to do so for several years, will, beyond all question, become an idiot. How much of all this is true on either side of the question is a matter that cannot be passed upon by the layman. This much is certain, that hypnotism should no more be allowed to be practiced indiscriminately by anybody and everybody and without legal control and regulation than poison is permitted to be sold by persons not properly qualified and authorized to do so and under definite restrictions at that.—Durlam Sun.

NORTH CAROLINA NEWS.

STATE ITEMS OF IMPORTANCE GATHERED FROM OUR MANY WIDE-AWAKE EXCHANGES.

A town can never prosper without unity among its people.

Secretary Ayer, of the Populist State committee, says the Pops will certainly nominate a straight State ticket.

The news which comes from the great State farms near Weldon is all favorable. The stand of cotton is the best ever seen there.

The Virgin Cotton Mills, of Huntersville, has gone into the hands of a receiver. The indebtedness is $18,000; assets problematical.

Evangelist Fife has been offered the prohibition nomination for Governor of this State. It is not known whether or not he will accept.

The North Carolina Baptist Sunday school Chautauqua will be held at Morehead City this summer, commencing August 4th and continuing one week.

Mr. J. P. Erwin, a liveryman of Salisbury, was accidentally shot in the arm at a shooting match about a week ago. Lock jaw followed and he died last week.

Charlotte is to have a new national bank, to be established through the efforts of O. P. and B. D. Heath. It will be ready for business September 1st with a capital of over $100,000.

G. W. Hinshaw, of Winston, in a private letter to R. A. Doughton of this place, says that he is authorized to state, by high authority, that the proposed railroad to be built from Roaring River to Stone Mountain.—Alleghany Star.

News reached Franklin, says the Press, last week that Mr. Wilbur Roane had been found dead in his wagon with his throat cut Wednesday night. Later reports state that he was not dead, but pretty badly carved up. It is said the cutting was done by his nephew, Walter Rembert.

Heretofore the State Board of Education has had the school books in charge and there was a uniform system all over the State. This was changed by the last Legislature and now the county commissioners are the judges. Each county can have a different set of books if the commissioners see fit.

The Supreme court has decided that the sugar bounty is legal and all right. It's "legal" to pay bounties to rich trusts, etc., but when it comes to making these rich nabobs pay part of the burden of taxes to run the government, it is "unconstitutional." You see it is just owing which way the money goes as to whether or not it is "legal or constitutional."

Fireman Hicks, of southbound freight train No. 43, was killed by the vestibule train about 11 o'clock last night at Morehead, the first station north of Greensboro. The freight train had taken the side track to let the vestibule pass and Mr. Hicks got down from the engine and sat down by the track. He went to sleep, with his head on the cross tie and was struck by the engine of the fast flying train. His head was crushed to pieces and death was instantaneous.—Salisbury Herald.

Sheriff J. H. White and Deputy R. C. Chandley, of Madison county, came down the Western last night with five prisoners for the penitentiary. The men were placed in jail here and were taken to Raleigh this morning. All were white and were convicted of murder in second degree at the February term of the Criminal Court but took an appeal to the Supreme Court. The judgment of the lower court was affirmed and the men will have to serve their time. Three were sentenced to 15 years, one to 8 years and one to 5 years imprisonment.—Salisbury Herald.

About a month ago Mr. John A. Edens, who lives at Holly Ridge, thirty-five miles from Wilmington, on the Wilmington, Newbern & Norfolk Railway, was seized with the hallucination that his family and friends had entered into a conspiracy to poison him. He, therefore, stopped eating and no amount of inducement could be held out to him to take even a mouthful of food. He also refused to allow a doctor to give him attention, and the result was that he died of sheer starvation last Thursday. For twenty-five days he had not eaten a bite.—Wilmington Messenger.

A Statesville minister, remarking, a few days ago, on the prevailing cry of hard times, scarcity of money, etc., said that it is not the necessities of life that the people are crying for but the luxuries. This is true. How many people in this section, for instance, are actually destitute? Poor people there are, of course. There are always have-been poor people and always will be poor people, no matter what sort of conditions obtain. On the other hand, numerous people enjoy more luxuries to-day than ever before. We are glad that this is so, but some of them, because they cannot obtain all the luxuries they want, cry out that they are poverty-stricken and oppressed. It is not the necessities of life they cry for, but the luxuries.—Statesville Landmark.

A Pretty Marriage.

A charming nuptial event was that at the First Baptist church at 10:30 a. m. to-day, which joined in the holy bonds of matrimony two of Winston-Salem's popular young people.

The bride was Miss Minnie Clayton, the beautiful and accomplished daughter of Mrs. S. S. Clayton, while the bridegroom was Mr. A. F. Messick, one of Winston's prosperous young merchants.

The rostrum was beautifully decorated for the occasion with potted plants. One special attractive feature was the large vases filled with magnolia blooms, which occupied positions on either side of the rostrum.

A large audience had assembled in the church and comfortably seated by the ushers—Dr. Thomas B. Ashby, of Mt. Airy, and Messrs. A. V. Nash, B. S. Phillips and Lawrence McCarry, of Winston.

When the hour for the marriage ceremony arrived the church auditorium was flooded with brilliant electric lights, and the bridal party entered, proceeding down either aisle, to the time of a wedding march, executed by the church organist.

The march was led by the ushers, Messrs. Nash and McCarry, up the right aisle, and Dr. Ashby and Mr. Phillips by the left aisle.

The flower girls were next in the bridal train, advancing by the left aisle and were little Misses Fannie Thompson, of Mount Airy; Addie Brown and Bessie Watkins, of Winston.

The bride and bridesmaid, Miss Cora Conrad, followed in the wake of the flower girls, while the groom was escorted by Rev. W. H. Brandenburg, "best man," down the right aisle, the whole party meeting at the altar, where Rev. Dr. Brown pronounced the ceremony which made them husband and wife.

The exit of the bridal party was by the right aisle, the flower girls leading and strewing flowers in the pathway of the happy couple.

From the church the party was driven to the N. and W. depot, where they boarded the train for an extended bridal tour of northern cities.

The Sentinel joins a host of admiring friends in wishing for them a long, happy and prosperous life.—Winston Sentinel, 2d inst.

SCENES IN YUCATAN.

THE GREAT WONDERS OF A COUNTRY UNKNOWN TO OUR PEOPLE.

Addison Coffin, a Cousin to Mr. Jno. L. Worth, of Mt. Airy, Who Has Explored All European Countries, Writes an Interesting Letter Here.

Mr. Jno. L. Worth.—Your kind letter came to hand in due time and I will try to reply briefly, for to give Yucatan in full would take many days of close work.

I, too, had read Stephens, Norman, LePlongeon and others, and was full of the highest expectation when starting from home. Yet, like others, had accepted as true what the books say about Egypt, Syria, Assyria and Peron ruins being the grandest and oldest in the world, expecting to find those of Yucatan second class in many ways.

I had lain by the shoes I had worn in my European trip, to be used hereafter, as having stood on the great Pyramids of Egypt, stood by the Holy of Holies in Jerusalem and in the Garden of Gethsemane and on Calvary among the ruins of Babylon, stood on Mar's Hill and the Acropolis, walked around on the wonderful ruins of Rome, travelled over the land of the Midnight Sun, and in every nation of Europe, but now I have another pair to place beside them, which have walked among and stood upon still grander and older ruins than they. It was enough to make LePlongeon give wings to his imagination when he stood upon the great Pyramid of Chichen Itza, Uxmal, Palenque and Merida, and think that the Garden of Eden was there, for every line and feature seen in them all original.

We are strongly impressed with this idea of originality the longer we remain among them. It seems evident that they were the originals of all others in the world. They are different in construction and ideal design; different in the building material, with a higher ideal of the refined and beautiful in architecture, combination and natural harmony. The great stone serpents that are carved in stone true to nature when surrounded, as here, with scenes of rural life, seem to lose all of their repulsiveness.

The beautiful tracing of wreaths and garlands of flowers, though carved in rough stone, has a softness than seen anywhere else, even though wrought in marble. All the ruins are built in solid concrete of lime, cement and broken or builder stone, and cased on the outside with large slabs of cut stone and on the inside stuccoed with a coating half as stone and as durable as the best cement of to-day, or any other day. The ancient Maya race were evidently the first builders on earth whose works are now known. Their civilization has been the highest ever known, as evidenced by the wonderful fact that there has been no defensive walls, forts, or defensive works of any kind, all seems to belong to a period wholly different from what existed at the time or since all other ruins were built.

Yucatan has been the center of an Empire more vast than any known in history or tradition, and the whole State seems to have been one continuous city. In travelling sixty two miles in one direction there were ruins in sight all the time from 30 to 150 feet high in every stage from perfect to shapeless heaps.

Dr. Edward Thompson, Mr. Gilky and others that I met in Yucatan, and who had spent several years there, say that there is not an acre in Yucatan or Campeche but shows marks of former human habitation, and near Ticul the whole country seems to have been one solid city. Wherever there is a group of ruins, there is a central Pyramid with a chambered edifice on top so adapted to the size of the base as to make them look taller than they really are. I will give a description of one of 14 immense ruins in the group at Uxmal; it is called the Governor's House. First, there is a terrace of solid concrete 400x500 feet and 60 feet high. On this terrace is raised another 150x350 feet and 60 feet high. On second terrace is built a house 50x300 feet and 50 feet high. It stands north and south and is divided into chambers 30x60 feet and 35 feet high to apex of painted arch. There is but one door in each chamber 6x8 feet, with no window or other opening. The walls of the building are six feet thick and the flat roof 10 feet thick. There is a high wall away across it in the middle; the door of the eastern entrance was ornamented with the most elaborate adorning I have ever seen, but it was destroyed by the brutal, murderous Spaniards, and the fragments are in heaps, beautiful in their ruins. The outside is adorned and covered with symbolic pictures and hieroglyphic writings, still very legible, awaiting to tell their story of the distant past.

The ages of these ruins are variously estimated from 7,000 to 18,000 years. Their originality and the evidence of wonderful knowledge of the builder satisfies me that they will go back 12,000 years at least. The most startling fact that presented itself to me was the most unmistakable evidences that the Maya race knew more of electricity than we do. All their buildings were non-conductors and fire-proof, and what is still more wonderful

the concrete of which the buildings were made were impervious to the X rays. And yet more wonderful all the appliances for electric lights are there, many of them still in place; and more and more wonderful they did all their stone cutting with copper chisels, as in the oldest ruins in the world. They also had the art of manufacturing razors out of Jade stone, with a perfect razor edge. They had no beasts of burden—all work was done by men. Their great highways were made for bare or sandaled feet, and the rockshow in places that untold millions of bare feet have worn them down.

Their most stupendous buildings have not been places of general resort as churches or temples, as evidenced by the approaches. The stone steps are not much worn while in others the steps have been renewed several times and still greatly worn. While among the ruins, and even yet, it seems more like a wonderful dream than an actual living reality. It was the same with my interpreter, Miss Julia L. Ballinger. Many times it seemed to her like some bright ideal of glowing imagination, especially when standing on the summits of some of the Pyramids and looking out over the sea of green forests with the vast ruins standing high above them in lone and silent desolation. It would take many months to really get an intelligent knowledge of the vast extent of these ruins, for they have all been overgrown with timber and thorny vines, and not one in five has been cleared off. At Chichen Itza there are 82 in a radius of four miles, only five of which have been cleared of their luxuriant growth. From the top of the highest, by the aid of a glass, we can see 100 more standing up like green haystacks. All around through the woods we see fragments of pillars, carved figures of men and animals, showing that small buildings have once covered the whole country and all show marks of taste and skill of a high order. Even the ancient stone fences show mechanical skill.

There is no trace of an intermediate period. The ruins seem to belong to one period and apparently abandoned at the same time under similar circumstances. If they were deserted on account of war and conquest, the conqueror did not injure the great buildings. Time alone was the destroyer until the Spaniard came. He destroyed more in 300 years than time in 10,000 had done. Some people think that likely the cities were depopulated by a great pestilence, for there are fewer tombs and burial places to be seen here than in other countries with like ruins. One man as imaginative as Dr. LePlongeon thinks he sees abundant evidence that they are antediluvian, which would explain their originality and the seeming simultaneous abandonment. But there is one stubborn fact, the present Maya race are descendants of those who did the carving and painting on the walls. A photograph of a model Maya of to-day is identical with those painted 12,000 years ago. Even the loose-flooding dress is the same.

To anyone who delights in speculation and riding hobbies, there is no better place to go than Yucatan to indulge in the pastime, nor is there any place more interesting to a general reader. It is nearer to us than any of the wonderlands of the world, being 475 miles South of New Orleans, from which city steamers sail every two weeks, and travelling is not more expensive than in the States. I got one dollar and ninety cents in Mexican money for every dollar of my money, and a Mexican dollar will buy as much in Yucatan as our dollar in Mount Airy.

Go yourself in November and December, and you will return and say the tenth has not been told.

Vanishing Lakes.

Minnesota may lose its claim to the title of the Lake State. A survey ten years ago showed within its borders over 7,000 ponds and lakes, but that characteristic and beautiful feature has changed wonderfully since that time. A large proportion of these lakes—at least one-third—have dried up entirely, and in many cases cultivated fields now occupy the rich bottoms formerly covered by from 10 to 20 feet of water. Nearly all the rest have greatly shrunk in area. Only the larger lakes remain. Like changes, but of a more marked degree, have been observed in the Dakotas. There were many large lakes in those states ten years ago, some of them miles in extent, but nearly all of them have now disappeared, their ancient beds turned into fields, and such as remain are shrunk to sloughs or pools in great wastes of reedy mud.

Lake Mason, in South Dakota, one of the largest and finest lakes in that state, was equipped some years ago with steamboats and hotels and all the arrangements for a western Chautauqua assembly. It had a reach of five miles for steamboat excursions, and in great part was from 20 to 30 feet deep. It has suffered the fate of all the rest, and the waters have so far retreated that at the present rate of decrease it will not be long before they disappear entirely. The causes of this falling of the waters are the diminished rainfall of the past decade and the more extended cultivation of the soil, which has absorbed the moisture which would otherwise have been drained into the lakes.—St. Paul Press.

A Month of Disaster.

The Chicago Tribune, which is much given to statistics, has been figuring up the disastrous occurrences during the month of May attended by loss of human life.

The Tribune gives the following: On the 3rd of May, 12 persons were killed by an explosion in Cincinnati; on the 15th, 120 by a cyclone in Texas; on the 17th, 33 by cyclones in Kentucky and Kansas; on the 18th, 44 by a cyclone in Nebraska; on the 21st, 10 by a cyclone in Oklahoma; on the 23d, 5 by a cyclone in Missouri; on the 24th, 49 by a cyclone in Iowa; on the 25th, 56 by cyclones in Michigan and Oklahoma and 40 by a cloudburst at McGregor, Iowa; and on the 29th, 12 by a storm at Cairo and between 75 and 100 by the falling of a bridge at Victoria, British Columbia.

It will be observed that the Tribune only made up its account to the 27th of the month. On that very day occurred the terrible tornado, or series of tornadoes, that laid in ruins great parts of the cities of St. Louis and East St. Louis, and wide areas of the surrounding country, causing the death of, perhaps 500 persons, the serious wounding of many hundreds more, and the destruction of property to the extent of many millions of dollars.

Truly the month of May, 1896, has proved to be a season of disaster, and it will leave behind it a record of storms and physical convulsions that will make it long remembered as a period of continued calamity.

Mr. Geo. W. Pack, a wealthy citizen of Cleveland, Ohio, who spends his winters in Asheville, and has considerable property in that city, has set wealthy North Carolinians a worthy example. Monday he made the offer of $2,000 for a monument to the late Senator Vance, the only conditions named in the offer was that the location of the monument should be in front of the county court house. It is useless to add that the commission accepted this generous offer.

The cure of Rheumatism has often taxed medical skill, but its prevention has been very easy by an occasional use of Simmons' Liver Regulator. It keeps the liver well regulated, and the system free from poison. Therein is the secret of health. "I have used it for years for Indigestion and Constipation, and also found it gives relief from a touch of Rheumatism."—N. Hughes, Lordsburg, N. M.

A prominent Indiana Republican, who has been circulating freely among the farmers of that state, tells the Indianapolis Sentinel (24 cent gold Democrat) that free silver will carry that, State this year by 50,000 majority. The Republicans there have declared for the gold standard and the Democratic convention will be almost solid for free silver.

If you would always be healthy, keep your blood pure with Hood's Sarsaparilla, the One True Blood Purifier.
