Bryan Interviewed.

HE THINKS THE REPUBLICANS WANT TO RETIRE THE GREENBACKS ALTOGETHER.

The Silver Sentiment is Growing. The Gold Democrats Not a Factor in They Act Independently.

(North Virginia.) "How do you view the non-action of the dominant party in the matter of money legislation?" a Virginia reporter asked Hon. W. J. Bryan.

"The Republicans promised to maintain the gold standard until foreign nations joined in bimetalism. This does not require any affirmative action except as to the attempt to secure inter-national bimetalism, and the administration has sent a commission abroad to consult other nations in regard to a conference. It seems to me that the Republican question all that could be expected of them. It is probable that the administration will recommend a commission to consider the question of retiring the greenbacks, and I think it is also probable that the commission will be so selected as to report in favor of retiring the greenbacks. The Republicans did not, during the campaign, promise to retire the greenbacks, but there is no doubt that the Republican leaders desire to do so."

"Has your observation upon the subject of hard times led you to believe that they are improving?" "So far as I have been able to see, there has been no general improvement in business conditions. The failures reported weekly do not differ materially in number from those reported a year ago, and bank failures have been more numerous since the election than they were before."

"What are the chief reasons of the continued business depression?" "The position taken by bimetalists during the campaign was that the low prices received by a large portion of the producers of wealth made it impossible for them to buy. When the farmer has nothing left after paying his taxes and interest, he cannot buy from the manufacturer, and when manufacturers cannot sell they cannot employ labor. When people are idle they are not good customers for the merchants."

"Is the silver sentiment growing. This is apparent from the number who are announcing their conversion, and from the spring elections. I have no doubt that the silver cause will be much stronger in 1900 than it was last year."

"Are you in favor of the maintenance of free silver clubs until 1900?" "Yes, decidedly. While events are the best teachers, yet those who believe in free silver must point out from time to time the course of events, and show their connection with the money question. If the members of the free silver clubs will make it their business to circulate literature and keep the matter before the public constant conversions to bimetalism will be the result."

"Do you expect the gold Democratic party to be a factor in the next election?" "It is hard to say what influence the gold Democrats will have in the next election. The Palmer and Buckner vote was only about 130,000, many of these being cast by persons who thought they were voting for a Democratic ticket. There is no way of knowing how many gold Democrats voted for Mr. McKinley. If the gold Democrats act alone they will be insignificant in 1900. If they act with the Republicans they may be of some assistance. My own opinion is that a large number of those Democrats who supported the gold standard in 1896 will be thoroughly converted to bimetalism before 1900. As I have had occasion to remark on previous occasions, I do not think there can be any political affiliation between the regular Democrats and the bolters. If the bolters come to us they must come back believing in the Chicago platform. If any of the Democrats are converted to the gold standard they can go to the bolters."

"What are your impressions of the South gathered from your tours through Southern States?" "The South is not suffering any more than the rest of the country. In fact, I am not sure that the South is suffering as much as some other sections. The people of the South have not borrowed as largely as they have in some portions of the country, and, therefore, not so much injured by falling prices. When a person is in debt he has certain fixed charges which do not fall with falling prices."

"Do you find Southern hospitality all that you expected?" "No one is ever disappointed in regard to Southern hospitality. The people have earned a reputation for their treatment of visitors and they seem determined not to allow that reputation to suffer. I always enjoy a visit to the South."
