

GOVERNOR McCORD Recommends Per-na for Catarrh.

Hon. Myron H. McCord, Ex-Governor of North Carolina, in a letter to Dr. Hartman from Washington, D. C., says: "Dear Sir:—At the suggestion of a friend I was advised to use Per-na for catarrh, and after using one bottle I began to feel better in every way. It helped me in many respects. I was troubled with colds, coughs, sore throat, etc., but as soon as I had taken your medicine I began to improve and soon got well. I take pleasure in recommending your great remedy to all who are afflicted with catarrh.—M. H. McCord."

HOW TO AVOID LOCKJAW.

Causes of the Dreaded Tetanus and the Best Treatment For It.

Bathers have long looked upon death by drowning as their chief danger, but there is another peril, less known, but a thousand times more frightful, the peril of a death beside which drowning is a summer afternoon's diversion—death from the germ of tetanus, or lockjaw.

The bacillus tetani distills a poison so terrible that the venom of a rattlesnake is next compared to it. One grain will kill 300 men. These death dealing creatures love a hot, damp climate. Any grain of sand, any tin can or rusty nail or scrap of meat or broken chain shell, may have a score of them clinging to it.

These are precisely the conditions of our American beach resorts—the moist, warm air, the beach too often strewn with rubbish, and in any case littered with broken shells and with bits of wreckage from which nails protrude.

It is strange that the most deadly work of the germ is done in late spring and early autumn. Fifty per cent of the death from tetanus are due to wounds on feet or hands. After the bacillus has entered the wound from five to fifteen days may elapse. The bacilli do not themselves enter the system. They remain in the wound, but generate a poison which does their work.

In most cases there are preliminary symptoms similar to those of an approaching cold—a dull ache, located before the ear, followed by stiffness in the muscles of the lower jaw. There is a growing difficulty in opening the mouth, and attempts to swallow exaggerate the symptoms. The jaws then become locked, and the disease passes downward to the rest of the body.

In the open air the bacillus remains inactive. It is only when it enters more deeply and gets away from the air that it becomes dangerous. It may be rendered harmless by cleansing the wound with a mixture of 1 part carbolic acid in 20 parts of water. Afterward the wound should be filled with tincture of iodine.

If the wound should be a deep one, caused, for instance, by a nail, or if it should be a lacerated wound, caused, for example, by a gunpowder, or a crushed wound, as with a hammer, the operation of cleansing may be a difficult matter, and a physician should be called in, who may inject antioxin.—San Francisco Call.

A Serious Word to Parents.

This is not, as one might imagine from the caption, a sweet-ignorant graduate essay. On the contrary, it is a serious word to those who have the training of the young men of the country. "The American boy is being ruined by the indulgence of his mother," said a prominent educator recently, speaking out of the fullness of his observation and regret. This is a grave accusation, and yet there is much reason in it. It would have been more just to have said that the mother is helping to do the spoiling, rather than to put the whole blame upon her, for the average American father is not all one's fancy might paint in the way of a home disciplinarian. Too often he is entirely negligent of his rightful share in the government of the children. He is tired or sleepy or nervous when he returns from business, and declines to be worried with the "small affairs" of the children. Nothing disagreeable must enter into his leisure hours, so the mother decrees, and so covers up the faults and failings of the children. It may be in this very point that she is most to be blamed, but probably she knows best the man with whom she has to deal. The average father, when appealed to for support in enforcing discipline, is apt to take one of two extremes: he is either too severe or he repudiates any obligation in the matter, declaring the mother must finish what she has begun. But while all this is true about the negligent fathers, the fact remains that the best boys, the boys who more fully meet the requirements of duty in all its lines, are those whose mothers are good disciplinarians. The utterly unselfish mother may be very beautiful in verse or fiction, but in the household she is often an unconscious blight upon the better qualities of her children.

In accepting for herself all of the sacrifice and privation she warps her boy's nature away, making him selfish and unappreciative. No woman need be selfish in her relations with her sons; there is an even-handed give-and-take spirit that is the acme of good management. It is the woman who exhibits this spirit, who exacts her share of the family comfort along with a heaping measure of respect and consideration, who rears the most reliable and self-helpful sons. This is the history of the men who have made names for themselves and honor for the nation. Search the family records of eminent men and it will be found that the large majority of them had exacting mothers; study the families in your neighborhood, and you will find the firm, exacting mother is responsible for the noblest boys. If it is true that the American boy is being spoiled by his mother, it is because of her unselfish love for him, and the sooner she controls this love the better for herself and the boy.—Memphis Commercial-Appal.

A Beautiful Extract.

It was night. Jerusalem slept as quietly amid her hills as a child upon the breast of its mother. The noiseless sentinel stood like a statue at his post, and the philosopher's lamp burned dimly in the recess of his chamber. But a moral darkness enveloped the nations in its enlightened shadows. Reason shed a faint glimmer over the minds of men like the cold and inefficient shining of a star. The immortality of man's spiritual nature was unknown, his relations unto heaven undiscovered, and his future destiny obscured in a cloud of mystery. It was at this period that two forms of ethereal mould hovered about the land of God's chosen people. They seemed like sister angels, sent to earth on some embassy of love. The one of majestic stature and well formed limbs, which snowy drapery hardly concealed, in her erect bearing and steady eye exhibited the highest degree of strength and confidence. Her right arm was extended in an impressive gesture upward where night appeared to have placed her darkest pavilion; while on her left reclined her delicate companion, in form and countenance the contrast of the other. She was drooping like a flower moistened by refreshing dew, and her bright but troubled eyes scanned them with ardent but varying glances. Suddenly a light like the sun flashed out from the heavens, and Faith and Hope hailed with exulting songs the ascending star of Bethlehem. Years rolled away, and the Stranger was seen in Jerusalem. He was a meek, unassuming man, whose happiness seemed to consist in acts of benevolence to the human race. There were deep traces of sorrow on His countenance, though no one knew why He grieved, for He lived in the practice of every virtue, and loved by all the good and wise. By and by it was rumored that the stranger worked miracles, that the blind saw, and the dumb speaks, the dead arose, the ocean moderated its chafing tide; the very thunder articulated: He is the Son of God! Envy assailed Him to death. Thickly guarded He slowly ascended the hill of Calvary. A heavy cross bent Him to the earth. But Faith leaned on his arm, and Hope, dipping her pinions in His blood, mounted to the skies.—Ex.

McKinley's Glaring Blunders.

Charles F. Bacon, formerly law partner of ex Senator Hill, says: "I shall support Bryan in this campaign, first because of the strong anti-imperialist plank of the Kansas City platform, and second, because of the glaring blunders of McKinley's administration and the character of the clique that controls him. In 1896 I voted for McKinley, although I have always been a Democrat. I believe the imperialist tendency of the administration is of more vital concern to the country than any danger from 16 to 17 for no financial legislation can be enacted with a Republican Senate. I shall vote for Mr. Bryan because the Kansas City platform represents true Americanism."

Does It Pay to Buy Cheap?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the more serious and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more temperate climate? Yes, if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the only remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with success in curing throat and lung troubles, "Doan's German Syrup." It not only heals and strengthens the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest and cures the patient. Try one bottle. VOYAGE ACROSS THE OCEAN.

Mrs. Lucy Milton Cundiff Graphically Describes Her Trip From New York to Boulogne, France, on Board the Steamship "Statendam."

ON BOARD THE HOLLAND-AMERICAN LINE STEAMSHIP "STATENDAM" MONDAY, JULY 23, 1900.

EDITOR MR. MOUNT AIRY NEWS:—I asked Mr. C. before we left home to notify you that we were going boat-riding, but he failed to do so; and now, after a sail of 3,500 miles, he says he is entirely too busy to write.

We left New York Saturday, the 14th inst., at 10 o'clock a. m., and have traveled continuously ever since without a single stop to take on or let off passengers. I am seated in the library of this floating palace that is gently swaying from side to side at intervals of from twelve to fifteen seconds, and bowing to the approaching billows every now and then, so that it is rather a difficult task to write. Our party consists of Mr. W. L. Sherwell, Dr. and Mrs. Kent and Mr. Herring, together with my entire family.

We have had smooth sailing with the exception of one day, which brought forth rain and high seas, and you may guess what followed. Quite a large per cent of the passengers failed to put in an appearance in the dining room. Many, however, including Mr. C., have taken three square meals daily since leaving New York. We are wearing our winter clothing and find our wraps, overcoats and steamer rugs a necessity while sitting on deck. Our steamer, the "Statendam" of the Holland-American Line, is quite an elegant vessel, measuring five hundred and thirty feet in length and sixty-two feet in breadth, and is of 10,500 tons burthen. I am informed that we have on board upwards of five hundred passengers, besides a crew of one hundred and eighty men. We have splendid music and many kinds of games, promenading, singing, conferences, dining, courting, concerts, etc., for amusement.

Great schools of wine fish occasionally attack our good ship, which makes one wish for gun or hook and line. They are anywhere from 18 inches to four feet in length. Others much larger are seen now and then spouting the water ten or more feet into the air.

I have explored this old ship pretty thoroughly, but am not familiar with all its departments and will not be when the voyage is ended. The service and fare on this vessel are all that one could wish. Our six o'clock dinner is an elaborate affair, consisting of from eight to ten courses. We spend about one and a half hours at these stately meals, and no wonder sea sickness is induced.

We have a number of good Christian people on this ship and a large per cent, who are professedly not. The pool, card and gambling tables and drink saloon are well patronized. Wine and other drinks are served at each meal, but at least six persons on board have never ordered anything stronger than coffee.

The new and strange experience incident to a long sea voyage will ever remain as a pleasant memory. We sighted land this morning, (a small promontory of Sully Island just south of Ireland). We are now entering the English Channel and to-morrow morning at 6 o'clock we hope to cast anchor at Boulogne, France. Will then cross over to Folkestone and proceed direct to London July 24th.

A child died on Sunday after we left New York and was placed in a coffin and heavily weighted with large iron balls and lowered into the surging waters to await the resurrection of the dead.

Three days out, a man in the steerage department, who had been indulging in too much strong drink for some months, became suddenly possessed with the idea that he must throw the passengers overboard, and to this purpose undertook to carry the same upon execution, but he was soon overpowered and placed in chains. He is said to be well educated, speaking six languages fluently. He is now allowed to lounge upon the lower deck, closely guarded by two soldiers. I want down to see him yesterday. He spoke English quite glibly, but I fear he is a hopeless maniac. Alas for him who looks upon the wine when it is red!

All who are going our way are safe upon the vine-clad shores of France. We are having all we can possibly do deciphering French terms and vieng with the Frenchmen in polite civilities. When we fail to be understood it costs us 25 centimes to a franc.

With kindly adieu,
I am respectfully,
LUCY MILTON CUNDIFF.

Confederate Veterans' Meeting.

The North Carolina Division of Confederate veterans will meet in Raleigh August 22nd, when Division and Brigade commanders will be elected. Circular No. 11, containing the call for the meeting is given herewith:

Headquarters N. C. Division, United Confederate Veterans, Durham, N. C., July 19, 1900. Circular No. 11.

Paragraph 1. It having been decided by the North Carolina Division U. C. V., at a meeting held at Division headquarters on the 31st of May, 1900, during the late reunion at Louisville, Ky., that its annual convention for the election of division and brigade commanders should be held during the month of August, after the State election, at a time and place to be fixed by the Major General commanding, the following circular is issued for the information of the command.

Par. 2. The committee in charge having appointed Wednesday August twenty second, for the meeting of the bronze monument erected by the State to the memory of the late Senator Zebulon B. Vance, a citizen no less distinguished as a gallant soldier, than illustrious as a patriotic statesman, it is an occasion for the assembling of his North Carolina ex-Confederate comrades to do honor to his memory.

Par. 3. It is therefore ordered, that a meeting of representatives from each camp composing the North Carolina Division, United Confederate Veterans, be held in the city of Raleigh on Wednesday, August 22nd, 1900, for the purpose of electing division and brigade commanders for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the convention.

The meeting will be held in the Senate chamber of the capitol and be convened promptly at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Par. 4. Camps may send as many delegates as will attend; and be entitled to as many votes as its respective numbers bear to the aggregate number of all the camps. To ascertain these numbers, each camp will send a list of its members by one of its delegates, certified to by its commander or camp adjutant.

Par. 5. It is further ordered that all members of the staff of the major general commanding, all brigadiers and members of their staff shall report in uniform, and that the delegates from the various camps shall report in uniform where it is practicable.

Tried to Kill His Wife.

In default of a $500.00 justified bond, Silas Seagraves, a white man, was committed to jail at Durham to await the action of the grand jury upon the charge of secret assault, having three times attempted to poison his wife. The defendant was arrested upon a warrant sworn out by the brother of Mrs. Seagraves. Recently, it seems, Seagraves formed a great dislike for his wife and he threatened to kill her on several occasions. A few days ago she was drinking her coffee when she discovered that there was something wrong and stopped. It is well that she did because in a few minutes the small amount that she had drunk made her deathly sick. It was discovered that Paris green had been put in her coffee. The other fiendish attempts on the poor woman's life were similar. If justice is meted out to Seagraves he will not soon make another attempt to kill the wife he promised to protect.

GIRL LIFE IN PAO-TING-FU.

The Daily Programme in a Chinese Mission School.

Among the missionaries of the American Board at Pao Ting Fu, for whose safety great fears are felt, is Miss Mary S. Morrill, a teacher in the girl's school there. In a recent letter she gives the following interesting account of a day in a Chinese girl's school life: "The first bell rings at 6.15 o'clock, and at once the work of the morning toilet begins. The girls dress alike, each costume consisting of a pair of loose, baggy trousers, which are fastened at the ankle by a strong ribbon, and a sack that reaches nearly to the knees. The latter has five buttons, one at the throat, one on the right shoulder and three under the arm.

"One of the girls always goes that the water in the bathroom is warmed for the morning face washing, because a Chinese would shiver with astonishment were she expected, even in summer, to make her toilet with cold water. Breakfast frequently consists of cornmeal cakes, cabbage stew and the remainder of the previous night's porridge. White flour, being a special treat, is used only twice a week. This is usually accompanied by a little meat, which is chopped fine with cabbage and onions. Sweet potatoes and turnips, fresh and salted, make a variety in the week's bill of fare. Suppers consist of porridges made of cornmeal, millet or rice. Beans are often mixed with the millet and rice.

"The girls do their own laundering. Instead of being ironed, the clothes are folded smoothly while damp, and laid upon a stone slab and pounded vigorously with wooden pestles. Studying aloud, which of ten makes a bedlam of Oriental classrooms, is a thing of the past in our school; but the expression on the pupils' faces while they are silently pursuing their lessons often reminds me of the looks that the back drivers wear after they were forbidden to hawker 'Cab cab cab.' The holler is still there, as a small friend once remarked as she looked at a row of the silenced horsemen.

"For recreation there are swings, jumping ropes and jackstones, and the girls all enjoy wearing articles out of corsetstays. The retiring bell rings at 8.30 o'clock. The crusade against foot-binding has been waged with success in Pao Ting Fu.—The New York Tribune.

Ruskin on the Locomotive.

The following description of a locomotive from Ruskin's pen is a beautiful piece of word painting: "I cannot express the amazed awe, the crushed humility, with which I sometimes watch a locomotive take its breath at a railroad station, and think what work there is in its bars and wheels, and what manner of men they must be who dig brown ironstone out of the ground and forge it into that! What assemblage of accurate and mighty faculties in them; more than fleshly fire, or over melting slag and cooling fire, fettered and finished at last into the precision of watchmaking; Titanian hammer strokes, beating out of lava these glittering cylinders and timeless respondent valves and line ribbed rods, which touch each other as a serpent writhes in noiseless gliding and omnipotence of grasp; infinitely complex anatomy of active steel, compared with which the skeleton of a living creature would seem to be a careless observer, clumsy and vile—a mere morbid secretion and phosphorus of flesh!"

"What would the men who thought out this, who beat it out, who touched it into its polished calm of power, who set it to its appointed task and triumphantly saw it fulfill its task to the utmost of their will, feel or think about this weak hand of mine, timidly leading a little stream of water color which I cannot manage into an imperfect shadow of something else—mere failure in every motion and endless disappointment? What, I repeat, would these iron dominant geni think of me, and what ought I think of them?"

RHEUMATISM-CATARRH ARE BLOOD DISEASES-CURED BY B. B. B.

It is the deep-seated, obstinate cases of Catarrh and Rheumatism that B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) cures. It matters not what other treatments, doctors, sprays, liniments, medicated air, blood purifiers have failed to do. B. B. Cause of the War With China.

How We All Are.

We have said that it was commercial greed and territorial ambition of European governments which has stirred up the Chinese fury, and have denied that the Christian missionary was responsible for the present condition in the empire. The latter statement must be made, however, with a certain qualification. It is true that the story of Protestant missions in China is with rare exceptions a story of sacrifice and patient labor in behalf of the natives, which themselves have always been quick to recognize and repay. As much, however, cannot be said in behalf of the Catholic missions in that country. They have never failed to further their work by the same methods which make them in a manner successful in America and Europe. They rely upon political power and prestige. Whenever one of their missionaries is insulted, or one of their stations destroyed, they call upon their government, if it be Catholic, to exact extreme compensation. It will be remembered that even Protestant Germany required of China almost a whole province as compensation for the death of two Catholic missionaries, while France, by its treaty with China, compels the latter to recognize the bishop of the province in which he is located. They are given a political status which even our consuls do not enjoy. For this statement we have as good authority as that of Rev. Isaac Taylor Headland, professor in the University of Pekin, who in an interview published in the Chicago Inter-Ocean May 30, says that these French Catholic priests are the principal cause of the present trouble. "The French Minister in China had the Catholic priests made Chinese officials of defined rank whose business it is to decide cases of litigation. When the Catholic priest enters the Chinese court, he outranks the Chinese official, he decides the matter; if he under-ranks him, the influence of his official status amounts to about the same thing. The Chinese charge that the priests procure decisions in favor of the French Catholics irrespective of the merits of the case." We have also the testimony of almost a dozen others who are personally familiar with affairs in China, and they coincide exactly with the above; therefore when one hears that it is the Christian missionary who is largely responsible for the uprising in China, it may be well to remember that there are two kinds of Christianity there, as there are in America and Europe.—The Ram's Horn.

Fine Figure

Many women lose their girlish forms after they become mothers. This is due to neglect. The figure can be preserved beyond question if the expectant mother will constantly use

Mother's Friend during the whole period of pregnancy. The earlier its use begins, the more perfectly will the shape be preserved. Mother's Friend not only softens and relaxes the muscles during the great strain before birth, but helps the skin to contract naturally afterward. It keeps unightly wrinkles away, and the muscles underneath retain their pliability. Mother's Friend is that famous external ointment which banishes morning sickness and nervousness during pregnancy; shortens labor and makes it nearly painless; builds up the patient's constitutional strength, so that she emerges from the ordeal without danger. The little one, too, absorbs the effects of Mother's Friend by its robustness and vigor.

BLOOD POISON.

Mercury and Potash Make Wrecks, Not Cures

In some cases the external signs of Contagious Blood Poison are so slight that the victim is finally within the grasp of the monster, before the true nature of the disease is known. In other cases the blood is quickly filled with this poisonous virus and the swollen glands, mucus patches in the mouth, sores on scalp, ulcers on tongue, sores in throat, eruptions on skin, copper colored spots, and falling hair and eyebrows leave no room for doubt. In these all unmistakable signs of Contagious Blood Poison. Doctors sell prescriptive mercury and potash as the only cure for Blood Poison. These poisonous minerals never yet made a complete and permanent cure of Contagious Blood Poison. They drive the disease back into the system, cover it up for a while, but it breaks out again in worse form. These powerful minerals produce mercurial rheumatism and the most offensive sores and ulcers, causing the joints to stiffen and finger nails to drop off. Mercury and potash make wrecks, not cures, and those who have been dosed with these drugs are never after free from aches and pains. S. S. S. acts in an entirely different manner, being a purely vegetable remedy; it forces the poison out of the system, and instead of tearing down, builds up and invigorates the general health. S. S. S. is the only antidote for this specific virus, and therefore the only cure for Contagious Blood Poison. No matter in what stage or how hopeless the case may appear, even though pronounced incurable by the doctors, S. S. S. can be relied upon to make a rapid, permanent cure. S. S. S. is not a new, untried remedy; an experience of nearly fifty years has proven it a sure and unerring cure for this disease. It is the only purely vegetable blood medicine known.

Dr. H. L. Hayes, 100 McHenry St., Newark, N. J., says: "I was afflicted with a terrible blood disease, which was in spots at first, but afterwards spread all over my body. These soon broke out into ulcers, and it is hard to imagine the suffering I endured. I had tried various blood-purifying medicines, but they did not reach the disease. When I had bought my first bottle of S. S. S. I was greatly improved, and was delighted with the result. The ulcers and spots on my chest began to grow smaller and smaller, and before long disappeared entirely. I regained my lost weight, became stronger, and my appetite improved. I was soon entirely well, and my skin as clear as a piece of glass."

Send for our Home Treatment Book, which contains valuable information about this disease, with complete directions for self treatment.
