PRESIDENT BROKEN IN HEALTH AND HAS AGED MUCH

Mr. Wilson Received His Callers in Blue Room and Talked in a Voice so Low as to Barely Fill Small Room.

Washington, Oct. 30.—The President's health is so broken that he is unable to receive callers in the White House. He is so weak that he is unable to stand and is confined to his bed. He is so aged that he is unable to walk. He is so ill that he is unable to talk. He is so weak that he is unable to see his callers. He is so ill that he is unable to hear. He is so aged that he is unable to think. He is so weak that he is unable to act. He is so ill that he is unable to live.

This statement, given by men and women who ordinarily Republicans, is in itself a startling picture of the physical condition of the President. It declares that the President is so ill that he is unable to see his callers. He is so weak that he is unable to stand. He is so aged that he is unable to walk. He is so ill that he is unable to talk. He is so weak that he is unable to hear. He is so aged that he is unable to think. He is so weak that he is unable to act. He is so ill that he is unable to live.

One of these visitors, plainly distressed that the strain of the League of Nations fight had broken the health of the President, described his appearance as "ghastly".

Merely the President was alert, vigorous, powerful and manly. He was so ill that he was unable to see his callers. He was so weak that he was unable to stand. He was so aged that he was unable to walk. He was so ill that he was unable to talk. He was so weak that he was unable to hear. He was so aged that he was unable to think. He was so weak that he was unable to act. He was so ill that he was unable to live.

Despite the appearance of his words, the President's face was said to have been quite low, barely filling the four walls of the room in which he was seated. This, with his gray hair and general appearance of care and long suffering and confinement, left a vivid picture on the minds of the small audience. They marveled at the will of the man in the wheel chair yet recorded sympathetically in their hearts an understanding of the tragedy it was theirs to see.

It is doubted if the President will issue a further statement before the campaign ends. In its dramatic setting the White House conference may well constitute the final appeal for the peace covenant and approval of what the President endeavored to do at Versailles.

Mr. Wilson received a delegation which said it comprised men and women "who were ready to put patriotism above party in the present critical hour." He spoke and they heard not as partisans but believers in the principles of the league with their faces set toward the hope of world peace. The President met them in the historic Blue Room, and because the room is small and the auditors were few, Mr. Wilson virtually spoke to the entire nation when he addressed this little group of pro-league Republicans.

Certainly the President will not deliver another speech before the campaign closes. In his letter to National Committeeman Costello of the District of Columbia, Mr. Wilson said he was not able to address a mass meeting here and that it would be "unwise" should he attempt it.

Those who saw the President today probably sensed fully what the President meant when he said this and appreciated his own realization of his physical limitations. The appeal Mr. Wilson made today was the appeal of a sick man, an executive worn by the cares of office and his long struggle against odds to have America and its senate accept his handiwork at the peace table.

Danville Selling Large Quantities of Tobacco.

Danville, Va., Oct. 30.—While Danville sold more tobacco last week than in any other week of the year, the average price showed a slight decrease. The tobacco warehousemen here, who are the largest buyers of tobacco in the world, are buying tobacco in large quantities. The price of tobacco is high, and the demand is large. The tobacco industry is doing well, and the farmers are happy. The price of tobacco is high, and the demand is large. The tobacco industry is doing well, and the farmers are happy.

Trade sales, blocked every day, are being sold in large quantities. The price of tobacco is high, and the demand is large. The tobacco industry is doing well, and the farmers are happy. ## German People Angry at Food Controller

Berlin, Oct. 30.—Food Controller Harnack's opposition to the admission of foreign foodstuffs has caused the German people to become angry. They are angry because they are hungry and need food. They are angry because they are poor and need money. They are angry because they are sick and need medicine. They are angry because they are old and need care. They are angry because they are young and need education. They are angry because they are all and need peace.

They charge the food controller with increasing the price of food. They charge the food controller with decreasing the quantity of food. They charge the food controller with increasing the number of people who are hungry. They charge the food controller with decreasing the number of people who are fed. They charge the food controller with increasing the number of people who are sick. They charge the food controller with decreasing the number of people who are healthy. They charge the food controller with increasing the number of people who are old. They charge the food controller with decreasing the number of people who are young. They charge the food controller with increasing the number of people who are all. They charge the food controller with decreasing the number of people who are none.

The food controller is a man who is not fair. He is a man who is not just. He is a man who is not kind. He is a man who is not gentle. He is a man who is not merciful. He is a man who is not compassionate. He is a man who is not sympathetic. He is a man who is not understanding. He is a man who is not forgiving. He is a man who is not lenient. He is a man who is not lenient. He is a man who is not lenient.

North Carolina is Fast Becoming Kentucky Rival

North Carolina is fast becoming a rival of Kentucky in the production of tobacco. The estimates of the United States department of agriculture of the 1920 crop, made the first of September, indicate that North Carolina will fall very little short of Kentucky in its yield for the current year. The forecast also indicates a decrease in the production of Kentucky tobacco and a considerable increase in the production of North Carolina.

There is nothing in the forecast of the department of agriculture to show that the quality of the tobacco grown in Kentucky surpasses that of any state which might aspire to be a rival in the quantity of its output. Bare figures as to the condition of the crop and the probable production in pounds being given. But it is known that Kentucky is not in danger of losing its supremacy as a tobacco growing state, even in view of the increase in size of the North Carolina crop.

According to the estimates of the department of agriculture, Kentucky's tobacco crop for this year is expected to be 442,431,000 pounds compared with 458,500,000 pounds last year. But North Carolina's crop, which in 1919 was $10,240,000 pounds is expected this year to be 424,525,000 pounds, only about 18,000,000 pounds less than Kentucky's yield. Virginia ranks third among the tobacco growing states, with an estimated production this year of 177,580,000 pounds compared with 181,100,000 pounds last year.
