Why the Germans Sunk Their Idle 12 Months is Fleet at Scapa.
On the return of the American dreadnaughts from the North Sea, Admiral Beatty, in his farewell address to Admiral Rodman and his American sailors, said "The fighting is now over and the talking will begin."
Admiral Beatty was a prophet and many interesting stories of the war by Generals and Admirals have appeared. The latest is by Admiral von Reuter, who sunk the German fleet interned at Scapa. Flow. The New York Times, referring to the new book, writes as follows:
"Admiral von Reuter, who was in command of the German fleet self-sunk at Scapa Flow, has recently published a book, 'Der Crab der Deutschen Flotte.' It is a brief account of the experiences of the German naval officers after the surrender of 1918, and of the motives which led them to decide to sink the ships. According to the Admiral, the responsibility was solely his own. He had no orders from the German Admiralty. It is not denied, it is even intimated, in the book that the matter had been discussed in German naval circles before Admiral Reuter sailed from Germany, but his final determination was taken on his own motion, simply as 'a Prussian officer in accord with the Prussian naval tradition.'
"This may easily have been true. Naval officers are often left in positions where they are out of touch with their superiors and must act on their general knowledge of 'the doctrine' of their profession. They do what they think their chiefs would order them to do if able to issue instructions. But Admiral Reuter gives special reasons why he made up his mind to send his interned ships to the bottom of Scapa Flow. He was influenced partly by his own deep insight into 'the British character. The whole scheme to intern the German war vessels he suspected of being a trick. Knowing the inherent 'duplicity' of the 'British Admiralty as he did, von Reuter was confident that only a good opportunity was awaited by the British to seize his ships. Hence he resolved to forestall English treachery by a treacherous act of his own. Besides, he had just learned that the Versailles Treaty had been submitted to the German delegates, and that they had five days in which either to accept or reject it. How did he know that the war might not begin again any day? In that case his warships would certainly be overpowered and captured by the superior forces of the British. Again the need of anticipating what the English might do preyed upon his mind and finally led him to sink the fleet rather than to run any risk of its falling into the hands of the enemy."
"Incidentally, Admiral Reuter reveals sorrowfully the sad state of discipline on board his ships. The crews were in almost open mutiny even before sailing from Kiel. During the first months of the internment at Scapa, insubordination and many signs of a revolutionary spirit among the men were constantly showing themselves. Several thousand German seamen were sent back to Germany because they would not obey orders and could not be trusted. It was not until after these mutineers and revolutionaries were got rid of that the Admiral felt it safe to hoist the agreed signal, 'Sink the ships at once.'
"Admiral von Reuter writes frankly as an officer of the old monarchist type. He scarcely conceals his dislike of the German Republic. By its weakness in the face of the Entente Powers, he declares, it placed the German Navy in a position out of which there was no escape except total destruction. But of what he did the Admiral is obviously proud. He simply decreed that the 'unconquered' fleet should go into its self-chosen grave. It never occurs to him to ask how an unconquered fleet could sail out and surrender without firing a gun.

Now Back on Job
"Only a man who has to work for a living knows what it means to get back on the job after not hitting a lick of work for a whole year. I lost twelve months straight time on account of stomach trouble. One of the worst cases I guess any man ever had. Tanlac not only made me a well man again but built me up 19 pounds in weight. I am writing all my friends in other cities to tell them of the wonderful news."
The above statement was made by George B. Lowe, well-known employee of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. living at 451 McGowan St., Akron, Ohio.
Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Buy a pipe— and some P.A.

Get the joy that's due you!

We print it right here that if you don't know the "feel" and the friendship of a joy's jimmy pipe—GO GET ONE! And—get some Prince Albert and bang a howdy-do on the big smoke-gong!

For, Prince Albert's quality—flavor—coolness—fragrance—is in a class of its own! You never tasted such tobacco! Why—figure out what it alone means to your tongue and temper when we tell you that Prince Albert can't bite, can't parch! Our exclusive patented process fixes that!

Prince Albert is a revelation in a makin's cigarette! My, but how that delightful flavor makes a dent! And, how it does answer that hankering! Prince Albert rolls easy and stays put because it is crimped cut. And, say—oh, go on and get the papers or a pipe! Do it right now!

PRINCE ALBERT
the national joy smoke

Prince Albert is sold in tippy red bags, tippy red tins, tippy red handbags, and tippy red tins. It is the most popular cigarette in the world. It is the only cigarette that is crimped cut. It is the only cigarette that is made in the U.S.A. It is the only cigarette that is made in the U.S.A. It is the only cigarette that is made in the U.S.A.
