

NOTICE

One fourth of the freeholders constituting a proposed special tax district hereinafter set out, having petitioned the Board of County Commissioners for an election to be held to ascertain the will of the people whether there shall be levied a special tax of not more than thirty cents on each one hundred dollars of valuation of property and not more than ninety cents on each poll to supplement the funds apportioned to said district by the Board of Education.

The said petition having been approved by the Board of Education of Surry County, it is therefore ordered that an election be held in said proposed special tax district on Saturday, the 17th day of December 1921, to ascertain the will of the people as above set out.

Said proposed district being bounded as follows: Beginning at the mouth of Horns Creek and down the Yadkin river to the mouth of Grassy Creek, thence up the creek to mouth of Adam Scott branch thence up said branch to the butt of Stony Ridge, thence across and including B. F. Scott's farm to the source of Hudson Creek, thence down said creek to Ararat river, thence down the river to mouth of Betty Kelly creek, thence with the old district line to mouth of Horns creek, being the place of the beginning, J. E. Hudson's home to be included in boundary.

It is further ordered that an entire new registration of the voters in said district be had. That B. F. Scott be and is hereby appointed Registrar, that Charley Coon and R. E. Barber are hereby appointed Judges to hold said election, that the registration books be opened on the 12th day of November, 1921, and closed on the 3rd day of December, 1921. That said election be held at B. F. Scott's store, in Shoals Township.

This the 31st day of October, 1921. Henry Wolfe, Clerk to Board of County Commissioners.

SOME EXAMPLES OF WISE FARMING

Bion Butler Tells of Men Who Have Seized Their Opportunities

(By Bion H. Butler)
Zeb Blue is a farmer who lives on the headwaters of Little River in the heart of Moore county. He was brought up to raise some cotton, some tobacco, some of the other things that the typical farmer in this section raises, and at his father's home he got right good ideas of making these crops. He married a wife who has a knowledge of farm life, and who has also a knowledge of the things that are taught in the schools regarding farm home making. They are a substantial pair of country folks, with a good farm, home conveniences, books and papers on the table, and they have the proper conception of making on the farm the things the farm needs.

But the other day I was talking with them as I drove past their farm and Mr. Blue told me a story of farm ambitions. Briefly it is that Moore county is opening a new world for the farmer. No, it is not peaches, nor tobacco, nor any of those pleasing projects that are doing so well in the Sandhill country. Zeb Blue's story is simply a tale of the capitalization of opportunity, and it is applicable over most of North Carolina.

Sells to Resort Towns

Not far from the Blue farm is Pinehurst, and Southern Pines is about the same distance, and the other resort towns and the prospective resort communities that are building. These resorts use a mountain of stuff to eat. Not just corn bread and side meat and collards, which are good things when you want them. But these communities use the things they want and they get those things largely from Boston or Baltimore or Florida, or wherever such stuff is made. Now Zeb Blue, instead of figuring that because the folks at Pinehurst do not buy much fat back and corn meal it is useless to try to sell them anything is undertaking to find out what they really want, and make that sort of plunder for them.

He is not going into any untested and improbable schemes, nor attempting to make those things that are not adapted to his climate, but so many things are within his range that he proposes to get some of the Pinehurst money by having things to sell that Pinehurst wants.

He will still have cotton on his place, and other staples that mean money, but he will also endeavor to have those other products that mean some easier money, and money that will come in each day he sends some stuff to his local market. Already much of that kind of farming is catching a hold in the Sandhill country, and it is making a big difference.

Successful Negro Farmer

Ben Leslie is a negro farmer near Southern Pines who has established a connection with the Highland Pines Inn, and he sells that hotel each season a lot of sweet potatoes, onions, and other eatables, and probably he realizes from this source as much as he would get for three or four bales of cotton, taking prices as they run from year to year. He also raises cotton, and is a good cotton farmer, but his sweet potatoes that go to the hotel bring him more for an acre of crop than his cotton brings. But he makes the right kind. He told me a day or two ago that he expected to have at the colored fair at Pinehurst a bushel of sweets that would not have more than ten potatoes in the bushel.

Up in Chatham county last week I stopped at the house of Jud Newton, a one-armed man who has been a tenant farmer, and with his one arm has made some mighty good crops of cotton, wheat and other things for his subsistence. He has a bunch of turkeys and chickens and tells me that there is more money in turkeys and chickens at the present market prices than any cotton he ever raised. On the farm they forage largely for themselves, and in the fall the turkeys are in good demand, and bring good money. Chickens are always wanted and at prices that is fair to look at these days.

Demand for Farm Stuff

Chickens are in demand in Chatham county, turkeys are in demand in Chatham, but the county boundary line does not mark the limit of the demand. The News-Letter, printed over at the University, has assembled some figures to show that the factories of North Carolina make in a year almost a billion dollars' worth of goods. When I came to this state a little less than twenty years ago the manufactured products totaled less than one-tenth that amount, or about a hundred million dollars. Now the total is close to a billion, and nobody knows where this flood is tending. Almost a hundred and sixty thousand hands are working in the factories, and they and other members of the families they represent are calling for a vast amount of stuff that the farms make.

Few people are aware of it but the farms have before them a steadily and rapidly increasing job of feeding the factory hand, the railroad hand, the town residents, who are steadily increasing in numbers, and the winter visitors who are also becoming more numerous every season. And this increasing buying population is scattered all over the state. It is confined to no one county and no one section, and no one section will have the monopoly of providing what must be provided.

Men Who Seize Their Opportunity

It is men like Zeb Blue, the farmer, who sees what is in front of him and who sees ahead, who prepares for this opportunity on a systematic scale, who will profit most by it. His type of men understanding what they are to count on and what they may expect. It is men like Ben Leslie who catch the opportunity that comes to him, and gets the money out of it as he goes along, and this man has made himself a farm from his work, for he lives on his own place. It is men like Jud Newton who realize that turkeys and chickens have come to be worth a price in the market, and that such things are worth making because they can help so much in the making themselves, and pay when they are made in this fashion.

NOTICE

One fourth of the freeholders constituting a proposed special tax school district hereinafter set out, having petitioned the Board of County Commissioners for an election to be held to ascertain the will of the people whether there shall be levied a special tax of not more than 5 cents on the one hundred dollars valuation of property and not more than 15 cents on each poll to supplement the funds apportioned to said district by the Board of Education. The said petition having been approved by the Board of Education of Surry County. It is therefore ordered that an election be held in said proposed special tax district on Saturday, the 17th day of December, 1921, to ascertain the will of the people as above set out. Said proposed district being bounded as follows: Beginning at mouth of Skin Cabin Creek on Ararat River, then a Westward course including J. V. Wall, then by the way of Jasper Brown's including him to the old Stanford District line near J. W. Falk's, then as the road meanders to Whitaker's Cross Roads, thence with Corinth District to C. D. Bruner's then East to Pine Hill, M. E. church, then Eastward course not including James Boyles to M. W. Wall place including it, then a So. course by H. G. Whitaker's not including him to the old district line to river thence down the river to place of beginning.

It is further ordered that an entire new registration of the voters in said district be had. That J. L. Patterson and H. G. Hardy are hereby appointed judges to hold said election, that Benjamin H. O'Neal be appointed Registrar to hold said election. That the Registration books be opened on the 12th day of November, 1921, and closed on the 3rd day of December, 1921. That said election be held in Stanford school house, Siloam township. This the 31st day of October, 1921. Henry Wolfe, Clerk to Board of Co. Comrs.

Oil of Eucalyptus from Australia

"From that far land where leaps the kangaroo Comes Eucalyptus, famed for healing fumes"

ON the other side of the globe, in Australia, grows the marvelous Eucalyptus, tallest of trees, sometimes 480 feet high. Its foot-long, twisted, leathery leaves yield an aromatic healing oil, whose perfume fills the air. Natives have christened the Eucalyptus "Fever Destroyer," because they believe it keeps away malaria. The Australian Government plants it in low, marshy places to prevent miasma.

OIL of Eucalyptus is one of the sources of the surprising efficacy of Vicks VapoRub against congestions of throat, nose or chest—against skin hurts or itches—against various bodily aches and pains.

The United States Dispensary, the great authority on drugs and their uses, in commenting on Eucalyptus, says:

"It is germicidal, antiseptic and stimulant; also expectorant, largely used in the treatment of chronic bronchitis and infections of the upper respiratory tract. It is frequently used as an inhale-tion. Its vapors are very efficient. It is an agreeable dressing to ulcers and is largely used in skin diseases; also often used as a counter-irritant in the treatment of neuralgia, rheumatism, etc."

Vicks penetrates and vaporizes. For hours after application the healing fumes of Eucalyptus, Camphor, Menthol, Thyme, Juniper Tar, Oil of Turpentine, Cedar, etc., are breathed into the affected air passages.

In literally millions of homes, Vicks is the standby for colds and dozens of common hurts and ailments.
