Christmas Seal Money Working

Those who bought tubercular Christmas seals have no doubt forgotten all about it, but not so the County Nurse who had the fund in charge. During May 600 sputum cups were bought, with a part of the fund, for the use of tubercular patients in the county to guard against spread of the disease by careless spitting.
A tent has been purchased for Jeff Gardner who is a victim of T. B. Another victim Walter Whitaker is being treated in the state sanatorium and the seal money is paying his board after friends provided for his traveling expenses. So the little seals, that carried good wishes to your friends at Christmas, are now carrying a message of cheer to the sick of our county.

It would simplify matters for the short-term marriage and divorce addicts if marriage licenses could be allowed to lapse and expire like other licenses.

The advantage in paper flowers is that if you use them at your wedding you can use the same ones again at somebody else's wedding.

IT'S A DAISY

The daisy is now the official flower of the American Legion, but there is a possibility that the poppy may again be adopted. The question will come up at the next National Convention in September.

Either poppies or daisies for decorations can be quickly made of crepe paper. In Minneapolis thirty disabled service men are making paper poppies at the rate of 12,000 a day. The flowers will be sold by the American Legion on "Poppy Day," the date for which has not yet been set.

Must Stand Trial for Aquatic Wedding

Lawton, Okla., April 27.—Rev. T. J. Irwin, founder and for 20 years pastor of the First Presbyterian church here who recently performed a marriage ceremony at a public swimming pool, in which the principals wore bathing suits, must stand trial before a church commission on charges of "conduct unbecoming a minister." Trial of the minister was decided upon at a session today of the El Reno Presbytery.

PARTY AFFILIATIONS OF THE PRESIDENTS

There Have Been Five Parties During the 138 Years of the Republic

By L. T. Rightsell.

Twenty-eight men have occupied the presidential chair since the organization of our present form of government in 1789. The first two of these men were George Washington and John Adams, both members of the Federalist party. Washington was President seven years, ten months and four days, having been inaugurated April 30, 1789. All his successors have been inaugurated March 4, except when that date fell on Sunday. The Federalist party was not very popular, even from the start, and soon disappeared from history, although John Quincy Adams (1825-1829) was by some regarded as a Federalist at heart. Actually one two Federalists were elected President.

The third President, Thomas Jefferson, was elected as a Republican, and his successors, James Madison and James Monroe, were members of the same party. It must be borne in mind that the Republican party of that day was distinct from that of late years, and was identical with the Democratic party of our day. All Democrats of today are proud to claim Thomas Jefferson as the founder of the Democratic party, although he and Madison and Monroe were called Republicans. John Quincy Adams was really elected by the Republicans, but by the acts of his administration was by many of that party repudiated and so failed for reelection. Counting J. Q. Adams, four men were elected by the old Republican party.

Andrew Jackson, the first President born on North Carolina soil, was the first Democrat President. His successor, Martin Van Buren, was also a Democrat. Following the four years of Van Buren's administration, who was very unpopular, owing to the financial troubles of his administration, for which he was not responsible, the first Whig President was elected. It would take a better political student than your correspondent to tell just what the Whigs advocated; but their victory was due rather to the dissatisfaction over the monetary troubles of the last administration than to any particular merit within themselves. They had extremely bad luck, for their President died just one month after his inauguration, and his successor John Tyler, soon broke with the party that had elected him, and was disowned by them.

Polk, a Democrat, was elected to succeed Tyler, but the Whigs again triumphed and elected Zachary Taylor in the election of 1848. The same fate seemed to follow the Whig incumbents, for Taylor died at the end of one year, four months and five days. His associates, Millard Fillmore, finished out the term. This ended the career of the Whig party, but it is due to it to say that it had within its bosom two of the greatest of American statesmen, Henry Clay and Daniel Webster, both of whom were too great to attain the prize of the presidency. Only two Presidents were actually elected by the Whigs.

While the clouds were gathering which finally broke in the storm of the Civil War, two other Democrats were elected, Franklin Pierce and James Buchanan. With Lincoln began in 1861 the line of Republican Presidents which continued for twenty-four years until the election of Grover Cleveland in 1884. Lincoln's successor, Andrew Johnson, broke with his party, as had done John Tyler, a quarter of a century before him, but he is generally classified by historians as a Republican. He like Andrew Jackson, was born on North Carolina soil. Perhaps this accounts for the fact that he was so much of a Democrat.

Grant, Hayes, Garfield and Arthur were Republican Presidents at a period when it seemed that their party had a permanent lease on the presidency, but in 1884 Grover Cleveland was elected and served as the first Democratic President since the Civil War. Though succeeded in 1889 by Benjamin Harrison, grandson of the ninth President, he was again elected in 1892, being known in history as the twenty-second and twenty-fourth President.

McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft and Harding swelled the list of Republican Presidents to eleven. Wilson was the eighth Democratic President since Jackson, counting Tyler as a Democrat. Cleveland is counted twice, so that Harding is known as the twenty-ninth President, though but twenty-eight men have occupied the presidential chair.

Recapitulating, the Federalists held the presidency for twelve years, though some would include John Quincy Adams four years administration. The first Republican party held it for twenty-four years. The Whigs held it for eight years, though some of them read Tyler out of the party. The Jacksonian Democrats have held it for forty years, or forty-four, if they claim Jackson. The present Republican party has held the office about forty-five years. It will be seen that the parties overlap to some extent, and that there have been five parties during the 133 years of the republic.
