

Woman's Club Notes

There will be no general meeting of the club this week, due to the state federation meeting in Greensboro. The meetings will all be held later in the month.

The finance committee reports that the personal service campaign is working like magic. Several club women have already made $10.00 and over.

The directors of the War Memorial Association met Tuesday in the parlors of the Blue Ridge hotel. The following officers were elected: Chairman, Mrs. T. N. Brock, vice-chairman, Mrs. John Sobotta, secretary, Miss Jamie Hadley, asst. sec., Miss Margaret Sydnor, treasurer, Mrs. D. E. Hoffman. It was decided to meet the last payment on the lot by a cash payment of $250, and a purchase of fifteen shares in B. & L. stock. This method is perfectly satisfactory to Mr. Ball and makes the payments easier for the committee. The chairman appointed a committee consisting of Mrs. C. H. Haynes, Mrs. J. D. Sargent and Mrs. Moir Martin to serve as a membership committee. It will be their duty to secure members for the War Memorial Association.

Christian Endeavor Meeting

A social and business meeting of the Christian Endeavor society of the Friends church was held in the home of Misses Susan and Margaret Gentry Friday evening. An interesting program was enjoyed. A unique feature of the social hour was the variety of refreshments, each member carried a pound of something to eat, and quite a lot of amusement grew out of the assortment of cakes, candies, fruits, etc. that graced the festive board at the refreshment hour.

Birthday Dinner

Friends of Mrs. Frank Peele, of Dobson township, gave her a dinner Sunday, celebrating her 88th birthday. Tables were built on the lawn for the occasion, and when the baskets were opened the tables were loaded with a weight of good things. Two hundred and fifty people were fed and yet enough remained to feed as many more.

Those attending from Mount Airy were Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Creed and daughters Miss Mabel and Thelma, and sister Miss M. J. Creed.

Boy Scouts Fight Rats

The boy scouts are putting on a campaign against rats in which they desire the cooperation of every family in town.

The organization is new and the boys need uniforms, and equipment of all kinds that pertain to the up-building of a fine organization.

Their plan is to sell rat exterminator by a personal house to house canvass, and for every package sold they will earn a dime for their organization. You are urged to buy the rat exterminator and use it to kill the rats on your premises. The price is 50c per package, exactly what you would pay at the store for the same package, and the boys will be encouraged and their organization helped if you buy from them.

It has been estimated that each rat eats or destroys $2.00 worth of food each year, this is a low estimate but even at that raising rats is a losing business, a business we can't afford to continue, so let us all join the scouts in this campaign to kill them.

The U. S. government estimates the rat population to be equal to the human population in any community. Just figure up what it costs Mount Airy to feed her rats each year.

The Tomb of Robert E. Lee

At Lexington, Virginia, there is a little chapel built by Gen. R. E. Lee, when he became president of what is now Washington and Lee college. He had not money to build it as he wished but as he could. It stands there representing the great christian hero's ideals. In it was his office, preserved today just as he last used it. Just opening out of the auditorium is that magnificent recumbent statue of Gen. Lee by Valentine, and beneath sleeps our southern hero surrounded by his family.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy have decided to undertake as their next great work the enlarging and fire-proofing of this chapel—enlarging so as to carry on the great christian work of our illustrious general, and fire-proofing so as to preserve his relics, statue, and last resting place.

May has been set aside as Lee Memorial month. The local U. D. C. has decided to sell flowers on memorial day Wednesday May 10, in order to raise their contribution for this fund. The girls will sell flowers on the street for any amount the purchaser is willing to give. Will you not thus help safe-guard the shrine where the south's immortal leader sleeps? Already men in the north are sending in their unsolicited checks. We must be up and doing. Every man, woman and child in Surry county should have a part in saving the Lee memorial. The committee in charge of the campaign on memorial day is composed of Mesdames E. C. Bivens, chair; M. M. Carter, P. A. George, John T. Moore, E. H. Dixon and Reid Jackson.

Mr. Olive, the pastor, will leave this week to hold a meeting at one of the country churches at Peters Creek. The church offers its prayers and earnest good wishes for his success during the week. He will return for the services Sunday. The regular mid-week prayer services will be conducted by some lay member of the church. Due to the absence of Mr. Olive the regular business meeting of the church will be postponed.

MILLIONAIRES' SONS WHO FOLLOW FATHERS' STEPSJunius S. Morgan Now in Limelight Directs Attention to Others Sons of Wealth

New York, March 25.—"Like father like son."

The announcement recently that Junius S. Morgan, son of J. P. Morgan would be associated soon with Morgan, Grenfell & Co of London for two or three years has attracted much attention and is suggestive in many respects to everyone who is at all familiar with the Morgan family.

Very few sons of the wealthiest men in this or any other country are strikingly like their fathers, particularly in the matter of work.

The Morgan family furnishes two notable exceptions. The present J. P. Morgan, head of the great international banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., resembles his distinguished father in many respects. The son looks much as the father did at about the same age. Their bearing, walk, manner, and various other characteristics are remarkably similar.

The elder Morgan had an exterior brusqueness over a big heart. The former characteristic, unfortunately, was not always understood. The present J. P. Morgan is firm and brimful of quick decision, but it is all with a winning and irrepressible smile.

The father did not go to college. The son is a prominent and devoted alumnus of Harvard. The son went to London to learn all the details of European and other foreign banking.

He returned to the United States and took his place in the great House of Morgan.

He has worked hard there ever since. Like his father, he never has, nor never will, be fastidious over the performance of details. While he devotes himself largely to the mapping out and direction of broad policies and big financial undertakings, no detail ever escapes him. He knows what is going on from the top to the lowest sub-cellar of the Morgan building at 23 Wall Street—all the time.

Let no one get the idea from careless and seemingly malicious statements that have been published, that he is not the head of the great Morgan firm, in fact as well as in name. There is not the slightest possibility that the name will be changed, as has also been intimated.

J. P. Morgan Sr., took vacations of considerable length at reasonably frequent intervals. His son does likewise.

A man more democratic than "Jack" Morgan, in his dealings with his fellows, has never put his foot in Wall street. If you have business with him, and particularly if he knows you, you will have to wait only until he is at liberty. All men with legitimate errands are treated alike by him. This is true whether the man is George F. Baker, chairman of the board of the First National Bank, and one of the most intimate business associates of the present Mr. Morgan's father, or a money broker or a newspaper man.

From the foregoing no one should get the idea that book agents and other similarly disposed individuals can walk in on Mr. Morgan unannounced. Not at all. The vigilant former police lieutenant Delaney, and his corps of able assistants at the main entrance, would never let that or any untoward incident happen.

The fact is, nevertheless, if a person has any good reason to see Mr. Morgan he can do so. It is not necessary either to run the gantlet of a long list of secretaries, etc., or to wait an interminable time.

His son Junius, who is going to London, is named for his great grand father. He is strikingly like his father in his walk, manner of speaking and democratic ways.

Junius followed in his father's footsteps and went to Harvard. He found his wife in Boston. After graduation he came to the House of Morgan, first as a clerk, and more recently as a partner. He, too, works hard early and late. And now he is going to London to do what his father did, learn all about the intricacies of foreign banking and foreign exchange. Ever since his return from his association with the London house, the father has been known as one of the leading authorities in Wall Street on exchange.

The father and son are great pals, both in and out of business. It is delightful to see the kindly, fatherly way in which the present Mr. Morgan often talks to his son, and to George Whitney and Elliott C. Bacon—the youngest three members of the firm, all of whom were taken in at the same time. George Whitney is a nephew of a former Morgan partner, while Elliott Bacon is a son of Robert Bacon, also a member of the Morgan firm for some years. He came from Boston, was a graduate of Harvard and for several years a fellow of the university.

Junius Morgan is every whit as democratic as his father. His dress is as plain, although it may be more expensive, as that of any one of the several hundred clerks in the Morgan offices. He is invariably gracious in manner and a favorite with his associates.

Outside of business, father and son are no less unassuming in their intercourse with their fellow men. Both have beautiful country estates on Long Island. On the train that carries several hundred men from the financial district home during the summer are both a club and a chair car. The Morgan father and son ride regularly in neither, but more often in a day coach. Often they are seen walking in the village near their estates. Both are distinctively home men. They are sons of multi-millionaires who are real men and who work hard.

But they are not the only ones. John D. Rockefeller is another. He is no less a regular and painstaking business man. No one should get the idea that his activities are confined to teaching a Bible class on Sunday and attending meetings of the trustees of the Rockefeller Foundation. He comes regularly to business at 26 Broadway every day in the week, arriving on the dot of 11 o'clock. Formerly he drove a fine pair of horses and was greeted by Fifth Avenue and Broadway policemen all the way down the line. Now he comes in an automobile which he also drives himself.

Formerly he was averse to granting interviews, but in late years he has done so with considerable frequency. Shortly after his return from China he received some 25 or 30 reporters, photographers, moving picture men and special writers in his office. To all he was most gracious and did all in his power to answer every legitimate question and grant every reasonable request. And mind you, he knew quick as a flash whether or not they were reasonable.

During business hours he is never idle a moment and keeps numerous secretaries and assistants on the jump. This in spite of the fact that he takes no active part in the direction of the Standard Oil Company, which his father founded.

John D. Rockefeller Jr. is the only son of the richest man in the world. But he is a real man, a hard worker, who is tremendously impressed with the idea that his great wealth, position and opportunities have increased his obligations to his fellowmen many, many fold. His manner of dress is the embodiment of simplicity.

Take the Twentieth Century Limited to Chicago and you may find another son of a very wealthy man who devotes himself to business—pretty

Hogs and Dogs are Helping Whisky Officers

Washington, April 8.—Pigs and dogs are helping prohibition enforcement agents in Georgia to locate stills and hidden liquors, according to a report to Commissioner Haynes today from Enforcement Chief J. W. Griffin at Savannah.

Instances where a dog had led agents to 12 different spots in underbrush skirting a field, locating a gallon jug of moonshine in each place and how by following a hog with a ring of mash around her nose officers were led to a still where she had been feeding, were related by Mr. Griffin.

"It does seem," he said, "that if even the animals are helping us enforce the laws of the country, people ought to be willing also to do their part in giving information which they may have of all law violators."

Lumbago

This is a rheumatism of the muscles of the back. It comes on suddenly and is quite painful. Every movement aggravates the disease. Go to bed, keep quiet and have Chamberlain's Liniment applied and a quick recovery may be expected. Mrs. F. J. Dann, Brockport, N. Y., writes: "I can honestly say that Chamberlain's Liniment cured me of lumbago a year ago last summer. When I began using it, I was flat on my back in bed and could not turn to the left or right. I had a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment in the house and this was applied to my back. It promptly drove away the pains and aches."

DON'T BE MISLED

Mount Airy Citizens Should Read and Heed this Advice
Kidney trouble is dangerous and often fatal.

Don't experiment with something new and untried.

Use a tested kidney remedy. Begin with Doan's Kidney Pills. Used in kidney troubles 50 years. Recommended here and everywhere.

The following statement forms convincing proof.

U. G. Puckett, farmer, Ararat Va., says: "I wouldn't be without Doan's Kidney Pills as I found them to be a valuable kidney remedy. If I bent a whole lot, it weakened my back and I would get very sore and lame. My kidneys didn't act properly and caused me to have terrible headaches. I got relief almost immediately, however, from Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I have any of this trouble now, a few Doan's bring quick relief." 60c. at all dealers.
