In Memory of Alice Haynes

To pay a fitting tribute to the memory of any one, especially to one whose virtues make the sum total of their character is hard, but we cannot let the life of Alice Haynes pass unnoticed. Alice was one of those rare characters of whom it may be said, "To know her was to love her." In her babyhood she learned a poem which began thus,

"Gather ye rosebuds while ye may,
Life is passing fast away."

and one who knew her well remarked that the sentiment of that poem was the grand theme of her life.

Alice was the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Haynes and sister of Mary and William Haynes. She was sick only a few days when God called her to come home.

She spent one year teaching at Blue Ridge academy, in Virginia, where she won the hearts of all her patrons and pupils. In September, 1921, she entered Meredith College, at Raleigh, but had to return at the beginning of the second term because of poor health. While in college she made many friends and won the hearts of the faculty.

Her popularity was shown by the beautiful expressions of her friends and relatives, all the way from New York to Atlanta, Ga. flowers from different parts of the state and other states made her last resting place one of beauty. Friends and relatives came from distant towns and cities to share the sorrow of the family, and to pay Alice their last earthly tribute of love.

Her funeral was conducted at the First Baptist church, of Mount Airy, where she had been a member since 1914. Early in young girlhood she gave her heart to Jesus and from that day until her death her life was full of christian graces that were expressed in full measure toward all with whom she came in contact. The following poem, which was used at the funeral by Rev. E. I. Olive, her pastor, is a most excellent interpretation of her character:

"O, the flowers are sweet in the garden,
And 'tis pleasant to see them grow,
And to drink in their pleasant perfumes
That sweeten the breezes so.

But often the sweetest among them,
We pluck from the stems where they've grown,
And take them away from the garden
To make them completely our own.

We wear them upon our bosoms,
Or place them within our rooms,
And revel all day in their beauty,
And fragrance of their blooms.

So the Master of earth's flower garden,
With its blossoms all fragrant and fair,
Is taking the flowers that please him
To heaven: He wants them up there.

He takes some flowers that are faded,
Some budded, and others full-blown,
And places them there in his presence,
To glow in the light of his throne.

We shall miss them from earth's flower garden,

And sigh for the fragrance they've made,
But the Master has given them beauty,
And fragrance that never shall fade.

And since he has wanted them near him,
To bloom in the light of his smile,
Let's rejoice at their joy, and be ready
To join them after a while."

The choir and pastor of the First church furnished the music. At the grave Rev. Vance Price concluded the services and on Sunday afternoon, July 30th, Alice was laid to rest; but often in the stilly night we shall long for a touch of the vanished hand that ne'er shall come back again." Henceforth her life is to be spent in that haven of rest where sickness and sorrow cannot penetrate and those of us left can only say "Thy will be done."

The flower bearers were Rachel, Lucile, and Ethel Haynes, Cleo McGee, Margie Johnson, Elizabeth Lovill, Virginia and Ruth Booker, Lillian Sparger, Lowney Olive, Frances and Sarah Foust, Louise McKinney, Kathleen King, Nell Clark, Annie Leftwich, Mrs. T. H. Worrell, Mrs. W. E. Barnard, Mrs. J. H. Fulghum, Mrs. Van Landingham, and Virginia Banner.

The following were the pall-bearers: Hugh Holcomb, Frank Johnson, Theodore Reece, Wayne Boyles, Kemp Reece, and Edd Snow.—Contributed.

LOWER PRICE MERELY, OR LOWER COST?

Goodyear has always felt that the thinking tire-buyer was interested less in lower price than in lower final cost.

On that belief Goodyear has built up the largest tire business in the world.

Instead of making tires as cheaply as possible, Goodyear makes them as good as possible.

While such tires cost more than tires made of cheaper materials, they last so much longer they cost less in the end.

Goodyear is not content, however, merely to build the best possible value into Goodyear Tires.

Through Goodyear Dealers a sincere effort is made to help Goodyear users get out of these tires all the value the factory has built into them.

The public has learned that the value built into Goodyear Tires, plus the service rendered by Goodyear Dealers, results in greater tire satisfaction and lower cost.

As a consequence of this knowledge, more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

Goodyear Service Station Dealers, also, believe in the Goodyear combination of good value plus good service.

The Goodyear Service Station here in Mount Airy will be glad to show you how to get greater mileage and greater economy from your tires.
