Boy Is Locked Five Hours in Vault by Companion
 Paterson, N. J., March 9.—Charles di Giacomo, 19, was in a serious condition in a hospital today as a result of an experience last night when he was accidentally locked in a concrete and steel vault by his companion William Templeton, a fellow worker in the People's Park bank.
 Di Giacomo was rescued after five hours of feverish, unceasing toil by a gang of men who burned their way through while his parents awaited outside for word of his fate.
 The first judgment of the attending physicians was that di Giacomo would recover. Some thought his mind might have been affected by his imprisonment in the vault, which, 8 feet high and 10 by 8 square, was nearly exhausted of its 600 cubic feet of oxygen when he was lifted unconscious.
 Templeton, to whom he directed his first semi-conscious inquiries after the rescue and who had collapsed when he realized what he inadvertently had done, also was under the care of physicians. He, too, was expected to recover.
 Di Giacomo and Templeton were filling away the books of the bank in the vault after the bank closed. Every night the two hurried to finish that the winner might stand outside and tease the other with threats of slamming the safe door.
 First out last night, Templeton called back: "I'm going to lock you in." He grabbed the heavy door and pushed it slightly. He was horrified to see it slip silently into the panel and lock. He summoned firemen, burners with acetylene torches and physicians.
 An ambulance was called. The driver backed to the bank door, kept his engine running and his hand on the wheel.
 After powerful blows that shattered the concrete, workers made a small hole in the steel with an electric drill and a hose through which oxygen flowed. Di Giacomo thrust a note through the opening begging his rescuers to hurry. The president of the bank thrust back a message imploring courage, but di Giacomo had fallen unconscious and the missive was found on the floor beside him.
 A hole a foot square finally was made in the vault roof and a physician was lowered inside with a rope. Di Giacomo was rushed to the hospital. When partially revived he first asked his friend to forgive him.

Deserted Rum Ship Is Found
 New York, March 7.—A "flying Dutchman" of bootleggerdom, the 77-ton schooner Victor engrossed attention of federal authorities here while belief grew that her entire crew had been murdered and thrown into the sea.
 The Victor, scarred of many battles with local dry navies, was finally captured without the firing of a shot. Her sails were set for a run down the wind, as she fled to safety many times before. But not a living soul was on board.
 Deserted and adrift, the mystery schooner was sighted by coast guards Friday. When it was taken in tow, and boarded fresh cooked food was set on the table in the mess-room. There was every evidence that the vessel had been hastily deserted. Her position, 112 miles southeast of Ambrose, removed the possibility that a shortage of food or water, or similar accident had forced the crew to take to boats. They had gone, suddenly, leaving the every-day things of life about the schooner as though they would be back any minute.
 Customs men investigating the Victor at Battery Park expressed the opinion that her crew had fallen victims of pirates who prey upon rum-runners off the New Jersey coast. It was considered not unlikely the entire crew of the deserted vessel met death at the hands of more violent outlaws who sought the Victor's cargo.
 Many run-ins with this particular schooner have given the local "dry" authorities considerable knowledge of her tactics. She was seized by customs officials on March 9 of last year while off the Red Hook flats.
 At the time she had aboard nearly 4,000 cases of whiskey. Her crew pleaded guilty. The staunch little Victor was sold at auction. She dropped out of sight, and has had various narrow escapes until the present mysterious occurrence.
 Up and down the North Atlantic seaboard the 12-mile limit is becoming more and more thickly populated with rum-runners and their ilk as warmer weather holds on. Yesterday the United States Coast Guard reported 12 vessels cruising about just outside the limit, all of which are believed to be laden with quantities of liquor.
 Customs officials threw a touch of color into their stories, saying that one of the vessels was a small liner with a crew in uniform, and that they understood it was the first of a new corporation's liquor-smuggling fleet, with a consignment of $700,000 worth of rare whiskies aboard. While professing to take little stock in this yarn, prohibition officials admitted they are interested in alleged activities of this new "smuggling corporation," said to be planning to put rum-running along the Atlantic seaboard on a business-like basis, with direct lines between Glasgow and New York.
 Ashore, the dry forces were active in the early hours today. Reports from New Jersey towns showed that numerous raids were in progress. Last night word reached prohibition headquarters here that liquor was being sold openly across the bar at a certain place in Jersey City. Eight agents started hotfoot across the river. When they arrived they verified the report, buying drinks of every description as openly as in the pre-Prohibition days. They seized the proprietor and four assistants.

OWNERS ASSERT THEY WILL SHUT DOWN THE MILLS
Demand Presented By Workers Sets April 2 As Date For Increase To Begin
 Fall River, Mass., March 16.—The textile committee made formal demands today on the owners of the cotton mills in this city for a wage increase of 15 per cent. April 2 was set as the date when the advance should take effect.
 This demand of the textile council which represents six craft unions places approximately one-half of the 36,000 workers in the eleven mills here back of a wage increase demand. The United Textile Workers of America several weeks ago made a demand for an increase of 20 per cent. A strike to support the demand has been voted by the constituent members of each organization. Neither has set a date for such a walkout however.
 The Fall River Cotton Manufacturers Association to which the demands have been addressed said before meeting these demands for increased wages they would close down their mills.

Rum Runner Killed By Policeman On Charlotte Street
 Charlotte, March 10.—James B. Davis, alleged bootlegger, was shot and almost instantly killed this morning about 7:30 o'clock by Louis Johnson, rural policeman, one of a group of detectives who had been scouring the countryside Friday night for liquor runners. Immediately after the killing, attorneys for Johnson produced him before Magistrate Cobb, who after hearing the evidence held that the officer was justified under the circumstances.
 With Johnson was another rural policeman deputized to assist in the capture of Bridges and Davis, for whom the officers had a search warrant. Four officers were returning to town after a fruitless search, when they overtook their prey.
 They called on Davis and Bridges to halt. The latter dashed up Trade street, the officers' car running alongside of them, and the officers insisting that they halt, it is said. They rushed on, officers alleging that Davis turned upon them and fired three times at them, one bullet barely missing Policeman Hartman. The officers fired at the tires flattening one, but the men continued on their flight. Bridges at the wheel, had difficulty and scotched the car. Davis jumped out and was running, the officers reported, holding a pistol in fired. The ball entered Davis' back and penetrated the heart. He died at a hospital.
