See the corn and wheat that brought the greatest yield per acre. Mammoth pumpkins, perfect apples, juicy plums, potatoes, onions, and hundreds of other exhibits await your inspection. Boys and girls, see what you will have to beat in the years to come. Grandpa and grandma, do these displays surpass those you used to raise? Neighbor, do your crops come up to the standard shown here?

Dear Friend:

Thousands of people will visit this Fair. Will you be one of them?

A greater Fair than ever is planned for this year. Exhibits will be more numerous, races better and faster, special attractions more thrilling, more spectacular, in fact every department will be improved.

Research and Education is becoming more essential each year, and there is no one week in the fifty-two where so much valuable information is assembled as at a good educational Fair. One or more days attendance will bring you a knowledge that will add to your prosperity for years to come.

Besides all this there is an element of amusement and recreation that drives dull care away.

Plan to hold the family reunion at the Fair. Meet your friends, make new friends, get new ideas and have a good time all the time—something doing every minute.

Remember the dates. A week of research, education and pleasure where happiness, good fellowship and benefit go hand in hand.

Yours very sincerely,

EDW. M. LINVILLE,

Secretary.

How To Get The Most Good From Your Visit To The Fair

There is a wonderful educational value in attending a good Fair and how people get the greatest amount of benefit possible. When you realize the thousands of dollars value invested in exhibits in educational departments you can readily see that the research for the greatest amount of benefit is not a small job. Therefore a few pointers might be of value.

FIRST—don't be afraid to ask questions of the exhibitors. They are there to answer questions and are delighted to do so.

SECOND—come early each day and systematically visit each department and if possible get the attendant or superintendent to point out and explain features in their departments, otherwise you may overlook the very things that would be of greatest value to you.

THIRD—Come with the conviction that you will be able to find many new ideas that you can carry home and utilize for your benefit later. Then jot them down for future reference.

FOURTH—Come with the idea that there are hours and hours of work on the grounds. Check up on our school department and boys' and girls' club work. Then visit the departments for the older people and surely every man and woman in this section will find many things among the thousands of exhibits that will benefit and teach them.

FIFTH—By the time all this seriousness is absorbed a little amusement would not be amiss. So a trip around the midway and finally a comfortable seat in the Grand Stand where a good program is offered by the Association consisting of races and acts.

This will give you four to five hours of enjoyment each day that will stand out as days well spent.
