"Well, then, I guess Fil come in." and he opened himself like a jackknife and strolled to his place.

As the train rushed over bridges and through suburban cities the novelty of my surroundings so engrossed my attention that I did not notice the card players again until I heard the lean stranger say:

"I guess I'm going to be real sick. I never had such a fearful pain before in all my life."

He put his hand on the pit of his tomach, and there were sharp lines in his face that indicated intense agony. The dealer looked up sympathetically, and his partner said:

"I've got a little something with me from Kentucky. Perhaps it might do you good."

"I come from Maipe," said the stranger, "and we don't drink rum down there. But, as a medicine, I might take a few drops, if you don't think if would go to my head."

Lounging back in my sent and watching the dissolving panorama of snow-bound villages, I ruminated on the Incident.

At Lynn I was reminded of the euchre players as one of the drum-mers got out and another passenger took his place. The last comer carried a gun case and was dressed for a hunting trip. When we reached Salem at 9:35 the two remaining drummers left. The lean stranger and the sports-man found two new partners and continued playing.

As I had finished my cigar and exhausted my newspaper. I tried to amuse myself by watching the game. When the cards were passed to the lean stranger he shook his head and pushed them over to his partner. "Deal for me," he groaned ; "I've got an awful pain in my side. It se like pneumonia, but it may pass in a minute."

The group looked solicitous, and the sportsman, taking a black bottle from the pocket of his hunting-bag, said: "Take some of this, man; you musn't fool with a pain like that." "I come from the state of Maine," said the sufferer, "and I'm opposed to strong drink. But, rather than delay the game, gentlemen, I'li take a little ns medicine."

At the town of Newburyport the lanky representative of the Pine Tree state was left alone at the card table. I was becoming interested in him. As we crossed the bridge over the Merrimac I lost sight of him for ment, but when the train had passed the state line I walked forward in the car. My invalid friend was playing seven-up with a swarthy stranger. Dropping into a seat, I patiently waited for developments. We were due to reach Portsmouth at 10:40. I looked at my watch from time to time and then at the man from Maine. I saw that he began to get uneasy. His face showed signs of suffering and he coughed violently.

The brakeman brought some water in a tin cup. The suffering man mo-tioned him away, gasping, "I wouldn't dare (cough) to take water (cough); it makes it worse."

The swarthy stranger drew from his grip a pocket flask and handed it to the sufferer. The spasmodic cough ceased for a moment, and a familiar voice said:

"My friend, I hall from the state of Maine and believe in total abstinence, I can't take a drink, but I'll just swallow a few drops as medicine." The car was almost deserted after

As the train slowed up at Portland, the remainder of his sentence was drowned in the gurgling sound that flowed gently and smoothly as in a familiar channel.
