CATTLE BANDS OF OSAGE HILLS NOW FACE LIFE TRIM

Government Wins In Long Fight Growing Out of Osage Indian Murders. W. K. Hale Was Chief of Murder Suspects.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 23.—After months of work in which hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent, the government today convicted William K. Hale, northern Oklahoma cattle man and alleged leader of a murder conspiracy that struck terror into the Osage tribe of Indians several years ago.

Hale, known as the "King of the Osage Hills," and John Ramsey, a cowboy-farmer, were found guilty by a jury in Federal Court on a charge of slaying Henry Ross, an Osage, who was shot to death, the government charged, so that Hale could collect $25,000 insurance which he carried on the Indian's life. The jury imposed life sentences.

Score of Deaths. Nearly a score of persons met violent deaths in the Osage County within the space of two years.

Investigations were started, but they came to naught. Persons believed to have knowledge of the mysterious killings were found dead, one in what was made to appear a train accident.

The government stepped in to protect its Indian wards. Department of Justice agents filtered into the Osage country. For months they worked, apparently without progress. They entered penitentiaries in the southwest to question convicts who had dealings with Hale. Then came the arrest of the cattle baron, his nephew, Ernest Burkhart, and Ramsey.

The state also had been busy, the attorney general having thrown his forces into the case.

Before being taken over by federal authorities, Hale and Ramsey were held on a state charge of murder in connection with the death of W. E. Smith, who, with his Indian wife and a servant girl, was killed in an explosion which demolished the Smith home.

Smith's Indian wife was a member of a wealthy Osage family, which, it was charged, Hale plotted to wipe out in order to come into their wealth.

Also Convicted. Ernest Burkhart pleaded guilty to a murder charge in connection with the dynamiting of the Smith home and named his uncle, Hale, as the instigator of the plot. Burkhart is now serving a life sentence in the Oklahoma penitentiary.

WHOOPING COUGH

In the spring is when whooping cough does its worst. There are each year in North Carolina about five hundred lives lost as a direct result of whooping cough and about 15,000 cases. Whooping cough is a long drawn out disease which if it does not kill violently does weaken the child to such a degree that it is very susceptible to any other contagious disease or infection. So often these children contract pneumonia and also tuberculosis. About eighty-five per cent of the deaths from whooping cough occur during the first three years of life and seventy-five per cent of the cases are in children before they enter school. If the baby can be protected during its first three years from contracting whooping cough the chances are eight to one that the disease will not kill it after this age. If the older child then, when it does get the disease is given reasonable care to prevent in so far as possible debility which predisposes to complications, then whooping cough may be robbed of nearly all of its terror.

A child that has once had whooping cough is not likely to get it again. Epidemics occur in waves four or five years apart. This is because of the accumulation of non-immune children. Most of the deaths occur in children who are in a subnormal condition because of some preceding debilitating condition. Malnutrition and intestinal diseases are the conditions most often preceding whooping cough death.

The commonly expressed idea that "all children must sooner or later have whooping cough, so let them have it and be over with it" is almost criminal. Any effort is justified to prevent a baby, and especially a weakened baby, from getting this disease.

Whooping cough is spread ONLY through contact with the FRESH secretions from nose or mouth of another person suffering with the disease. The particular bug which causes it is a bacillus belonging to the same family group as the influenza bacillus. This bug dies very quickly outside the human body. Droplets diffused by coughing or sneezing are the greatest source of danger. Whooping cough vaccine often does marvelous good. The best cure is guarding your baby. If, in spite of every care your baby does get sick, then give it every possible medical care and attention.

Weather experts pointed out that high winds, such as the hurricane which devastated portions of Florida, may be attributed to radically different temperature conditions. However, just why there has been a serious epidemic of storms within recent months is still an enigma.

Some experts have advanced the theory that the approach of the maximum sun spot period, due in 1928, has exerted magnetic activity on the earth, causing quick variations in temperature and other electrical disturbances creating terrific storms.

At present, four large sun spots are visible from the earth. These spots are gigantic disturbances on the face of the sun, causing flames to leap out into space millions of miles. The maximum sun spot period in the past has been accompanied by storm epidemics with temperatures somewhat below normal, according to scientists.

Weather bureau officials said that weather conditions in Labrador, the Hudson bay region and Alaska, where many of the American cold waves are born, are virtually normal just now.

ITALIAN IDOL ELUDES DEATH FOR 6TH TIME

Fury Seizes Multitude and Boy is Lynched Before Police Reach Scene. Bologna, Italy, Oct. 31.—Benito Mussolini has once again escaped the assassin's bullet.

A youth shot at him today, the bullet ripping a piece out of the premier's coat. The assailant was lynched by an infuriated mob.

The fascist premier was leaving a meeting at the stadium, and was at the moment being acclaimed by the great assemblage. The youth stepped forward and with quick action fired point blank. The bullet cut the sash of the grand cordon of the order of St. Maurice and St. Lazarus, which adorned the premier's uniform, ripped away a piece of cloth from the coat and grazed the sleeve of the mayor of Bologna, who accompanied him.

There were startled exclamations, a tremulous silence and fury swept through the multitude. The duke's assailant, seeming a mere boy of 15, was seized and, before the police could throw a protection cordon around him, was killed by the mob.

Mussolini remained calm and composed. His automobile halted for a few moments and then proceeded to the railway station.

Benito Mussolini, Italy's fascist premier, has escaped the hand of the assassin at least six times since he marched into Rome four years ago and assumed control of the affairs of the Italian people at the head of government.

Only so short a time ago as September 11 a young Italian stone-cutter threw a bomb at the premier's automobile in Rome. The missile struck a window of the limousine but did not explode until it had fallen to the ground. Mussolini escaped unharmed.

On April previously, just before Mussolini's departure for Tripoli, Miss Violet Gibson, an English woman, fired a shot which caused a slight injury to the tip of his nose. The attack was made when the premier was leaving a session of the congress of surgeons in Rome. Miss Gibson has since been declared insane by medical experts testifying at her trial.

An attempt in November, 1921, was frustrated when the police discovered a plot to assassinate him by the former socialist deputy Zanboni. On Italy's armistice day as the premier was on his way to make a speech from his residence, Zanboni was found concealed in a nearby hotel with a high-powered rifle fitted with telescopic sights and set up in direct line with the balcony where Mussolini was to stand.
