STATE'S LEGISLATORS MUST HAVE THEIR FUN

Cafe Waitresses Run When Dr. Haywood Comes In, Is One Story At Capitol. Brooks 'Fixes' Sutton.

Raleigh, Jan. 22.—Numerous happenings in the legislature this week have been many and personalities have not been spared by fellow members in their determination to brighten up the days spent in Raleigh. Several really excellent sidelights on the general assembly have been broadcast.

One of the best was a story, told the day after Dr. Oscar Haywood, of Montgomery, introduced his famous contra-ceptive bill, designed to prevent immorality. Before the health committee of the house, the bill was slowed up and a special sub-committee appointed to look into the measure and study it carefully. During the consideration of the bill that afternoon, members of the house waxed eloquent pro and con and said many things about the bill which the newspapers cannot print. The next morning the story was going the rounds that, when Dr. Haywood went to a cafe to get his breakfast, the young girl waiters wouldn't wait on him and that some of them fled at the sight of the Montgomery preacher, to the recesses of the kitchen.

Another good one was "pulled" on Fred Sutton, representative from Lenoir county, when he was quizzing Dr. E. C. Brooks, head of North Carolina State college, Raleigh, as to the necessity of an engineering school at Chapel Hill and also at the Raleigh institution. After the Kinston man had satisfied his curiosity, he told Dr. Brooks that he had studied engineering at the university, but that the following real estate lying and being in Marsh Township, Surry County, N. C., and bounded as follows:

Beginning at a rock at the Rockford road runs north with G. B. Bledsoe's line to J. W. Wood's line; thence with his line to a spanish oak; thence east with Lee William's line to a pine, then southeast to the Rockford road, a rock; thence up the road as it meanders to the beginning. Containing 11.10 acres more or less.

Terms of sale one-half cash, and remainder in twelve months.

This Dec. 28, 1926.

the subject was too difficult for him and that he had switched to the law school.

"Have you mind Mr. Sutton," Dr. Brooks replied quickly, "there are plenty of other good lawyers who have done the same thing." The appropriation committee members of the two houses laughed heartily and Mr. Sutton had nothing more to ask Dr. Brooks that day.

A few days ago the Goldsboro News had a short item for the benefit of Dr. Haywood, aimed at his anti-petting bill. The Montgomery man wanted it made possible for officers to search all automobiles parked on highways at night and observe if petting and so forth, contrary to law, was going on. The Wayne paper pointed out the fact that there were two classes of "petting" just "plain petting," which was performed in the interior of homes, and "necking," which went on outside of such homes and in automobiles and so forth. The paper urged that Dr. Haywood amend the bill so as to take care of "necking," believing that his bill would not carry any weight against auto courting parties unless the term was changed. The authority for the two definitions was given as coming from students at Chapel Hill, where apparently the boys and girls are adept at unraveling such problems.

Following the telling of this story around Raleigh, one solon remarked that "petting within the house was without the law" and "necking outside the house wasn't petting at all." Fritz Smith, reading clerk in the senate, is creating much merriment from time to time with his pronunciation of certain words. He has denoted "purchase as "pur-chase"; "expedite" as "ex-speed-ite" and "deputy as due-puty." But he is getting better informed as to pronunciation, it seems.

At any rate, Fritz was the subject of an editorial in the Goldsboro News the other day and it can be taken as a district compliment or an affront, according to one's desires. He is tickled with it, however. It follows:

"Well, who would have thought it? B. Fritz Smith was selected as reading clerk for the senate and selected after a demonstration of his powers in competition with another man. Old Fritz, who used to run himself crazy calling figures on the Trinity college football team. A good old boy, hailing from New Bern, faked his age to get into the United States army. A speed demon as a motorcycle courier on the front. Gassed in action.

"A good sport. But playing dead in the senate of the North Carolina general assembly? That is beyond us."

"One of two things. The state senate doesn't know it eggs in the matter of reading or 'due doesn't give a damn. 'Cause we know Fritz Smith."

STATE'S TURN FOR DISASTER COMING LATER

And It Will Have Death List Like The Montreal Theatre Fire, Says Fire Marshal.

Raleigh, Jan. 20.—"North Carolina's turn is coming."

"There are conditions here the same as in the Montreal theatre where 76 children were killed," he told members of the joint insurance committee. "We've just been lucky so far."

The warning was issued for the insurance department which wants more adequate laws requiring sufficient exits for theatres and hospitals.

Legislators were told that at least half the theatres in the state would be veritable death traps in case of an actual fire or a cry of fire.

Hospitals, they learned, were little better.

"You've got a chance to remedy this," Mr. Brockwell emphasized, "and the time is now. If you don't you're going to wake up some day and find North Carolina furnishing black headlines for the whole country just as Montreal did last week."

Stacy Wade, state insurance commissioner, promised to have a draft of laws his department thinks necessary for fire and panic prevention ready to present to the committee late today.
