MOON WOULD SHINE IN WAR OF WORLDS

Low Lunar Gravity Would Increase Gun Range.

Washington.—If men from the earth were ever able to reach the moon, by the methods of Jules Verne or H. G. Wells, they would engage in warfare in a way unprecedented on the earth, for the ordinary 75-millimeter field gun would shoot three times as far there as did the German long range gun that bombarded Paris during the war. Though the range of the 75 is about 12,000 yards on the earth, on the moon this could be about 350 miles. Dr. Fred E. Wright, physicist of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, said in a lecture.

Could Fire 3,400 Miles. With the long-range gun that bombarded Paris from a point about seventy miles away, and had a muzzle velocity of about a mile a second, the lunar gunner could fire nearly half way around the moon, 3,400 miles. If the gun were pointed directly upward it would reach a height of a thousand miles above the lunar surface. At a muzzle velocity of a little less than a mile and a half a second, which is not beyond the realm of possibility, the projectile could be fired completely off the moon, at the earth or some other planet if desired. For a projectile to leave the earth it would have to be fired at a velocity of eighteen miles per second, or at nearly seven miles a second if the earth had no atmosphere.

Doctor Wright has made these studies of the diminished force of gravity and lack of atmosphere on the moon's surface in connection with the work of a Carnegie Institution committee of astronomers, mathematicians and geologists who are collaborating in an effort to learn about the earth's satellite.

"The geologist, accustomed as he is to working with conditions as they exist on the earth's surface, finds himself in a different kind of world when he studies the moon," said Doctor Wright. "The force of gravity to which he is accustomed being so much less, many phenomena would be different. For example, volcanoes on the earth throw rocks only a short distance, so that they often fall back into the crater from which they came. But moon volcanoes would throw material much farther. The result would be that the inside floor of the volcanic craters would be lower than the outer surface, just the opposite of the earthy volcanic conditions. Also the craters would be much larger than any on the earth. Telescopic observation shows that both of these conditions actually occur."

"Another point of marked difference is the lack of erosion forms on the moon. While so many of the earthy surface features are the result of weathering by wind and water, the moon is without atmosphere and moisture and these forms are absent."

Measures Gravity on Earth. Doctor Wright has also been investigating the force of gravity of the earth and is developing a new form of apparatus for measuring its intensity. The standard way of doing it is with a very accurate pendulum, but the method is complicated and a week or more is required to set up the apparatus at any one place and make the readings. The new instrument, which measures the twisting of a spiral tungsten spring due to the earth's attraction, gives promise of permitting readings comparable in accuracy with the pendulum to be made in a few hours.
