How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

DRUMMING OUT OF CAMP

THIS is an expression which is sometimes appropriated into everyday speech from the parlance of places where men foregather. A member of a team or one of any group of men becoming obstreperous or troublesome is threatened with being "drummed out of camp"—in other words, thrown out! The phrase had its origin in the army, where at one time it was of literal significance. Years ago, when a soldier was dishonorably discharged he was literally "drummed out of the regiment." The regiment was lined up in full dress, and the offender placed in the middle of a hollow square. His buttons and shoulder-straps were then cut off and he was led off the reservation while the band played a funeral dirge! An apt phrase, "drumming a man out of camp" soon found its way into the language of men regardless of its military significance. And today it is frequently encountered, used in its figurative sense in common speech. (Copyright.)

Superstitions Lasting
The black cat superstition is a direct descendant of the days when the cat was worshipped in Egypt. Some years ago the swastika swept the country as a lucky emblem. As a basic form of design, it was known in the Orient thousands of years ago, and recent excavations have disclosed that it was similarly used as a religious ornament by the Mayas and Incas of Central and South America hundreds of years before Columbus discovered America. As a lucky emblem it was based on oriental legends, where it has played a part in religious worship for centuries.
