Think Brazil Coast Swallowed Redfern

Rio Janeiro, Sept. 4.—More than a week has elapsed since the definite disappearance of Paul Redfern, American aviator, on an attempted flight from Brunswick, Ga., to Brazil, and there is increasing fear here that he has disappeared forever.

This fear is the stronger for Brazilians because only a few months ago their northeastern coast was the tragic scene of the French flier Saint Roman on his flight from Africa. No news ever has been received of the Frenchman, and it is thought possible that there may be a similar ending to Redfern's adventure.

The national telegraph department has begun its second week's search, which thus far has been without results. Every effort has been made to locate the missing aviator somewhere in the northern states of Brazil and it is the intention to extend this search by every means at hand. There is still the possibility, of course, that Redfern landed in a district where he might find aid, but would be isolated for many weeks.

Tobacco Farmers Invited To The Moore County Sandhills

The best prospect for good tobacco farmers in this country is in Moore and Hoke county Sandhills, where lands are cheap, or to be had by renting or as tenants, as well as by purchase, where tobacco prices are at the top as compared with any other section, where good farmers are welcomed and where newcomers have been unusually successful. C. H. Tappa, who came this way from Oxford 12 years ago, expects to harvest 175,000 pounds of leaf this year. Last year he averaged 37 cents a pound at Aberdeen. J. W. Slate, recently from Danbury, will have about 60,000 pounds. He says he can handle about twice as many acres to the hand as back home.
