Total of 404 Persons Killed or Injured in Automobile Accidents Last Month.

Raleigh, Oct. 25.—Year average automobile driver in North Carolina who has an accident is not drunk. He is plain careless.

He drives in the daytime, on Sunday. His automobile is in good condition. He drives on a straight, dry road on a clear day. He is over 25 years old and has had more than a year's driving experience. He does not keep to the right of the road, and drives a passenger car.

A total of 404 persons were killed or injured in last month's automobile accidents, 67 from collision with pedestrians, 222 collided with automobiles, 14 with horse drawn vehicles, 12 with railroad trains, 18 with some fixed object, two with bicycles, 68 were in head-on collision accidents. In the previous month, 483 persons were killed or injured.

Of the 404 in the September accident toll, 61 were killed and 343 injured.

Most of those in the accident list drove on the wrong side of the road, did not have the right of way, and some drove off the roadways and were exceeding the speed limit.

LIMIT REACHED IN TAXES, SAYS DOUGHTON

They Are High Enough, Says Commissioner, Who Urges Use of Caution.

Rocky Mount, Oct. 24.—"I have come to the deliberate conclusion that taxes in North Carolina are now high enough and that we should proceed carefully in making the burden any heavier," Hon. R. A. Doughton, State Commissioner of Revenue, declared in concluding an address before the weekly session of the Current Topics club at the Y. M. C. A. last night.

Commissioner Doughton began his address with emphasis upon the necessity for taxes for the maintenance of government and civilization. He then took up the North Carolina system of taxation and traced how in 1921 the State tax burden had been lifted from physical property and placed largely upon incomes. He then explained the income measure and went into detail to point out its protections, limitations and brackets. The income tax has now become the backbone of the State's taxation system, the commissioner reiterated.

The speaker listed the income tax, inheritance tax, franchise tax and license tax, each of which he explained in detail, as the four major sources of State revenue. Listing the various amounts provided from these different sources, with the income tax leading with $6,339,000. Commissioner Doughton showed that the State from these major and various minor sources received $14,175,424.33.

Commissioner Doughton took up the highway fund and showed that approximately $15,000,000 was secured from gasoline and license fees last year. He pointed out that after meeting all expenses and setting aside money to meet maturing bond issues, provide a sinking fund and maintain the State's highway system, between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 was left for construction purposes. If the federal government continues its appropriation as in the past, the commissioner declared, there will be about $5,000,000 for highway construction purposes next year.

The speaker then took up what he declared to be the grave problem growing out of the highway construction program—the mounting casualty lists from automobile wrecks. Citing official reports which have been tabulated at his office since the first of July, the commissioner showed that there had been an increase in accidents and accident casualties every month.

Since the start of tabulation of official records July 1, there have been 961 automobile wrecks in the State, Commissioner Doughton said, with 163 persons killed and 1,170 injured.

"What the solution may be, I do not know," declared the speaker in conclusion, "but it presents a problem which calls for the most careful thought and consideration of our citizenship.

"The future of North Carolina rests with you business men. You must study State problems and aid in solving them," Mr. Doughton told the club.

Slays Himself as Grandfather and Father Had Done.

Bonlee, Oct. 24.—J. M. Sanders, a carpenter, followed in the footsteps of his father and grandfather by committing suicide at his home near here.

As an indication of his determination to make self-destruction complete, he fired three shots into his breast, and when these failed to exterminate life, he sent a bullet through his brain.

Although in good health, Sanders had been known to have fits of despondency.

About a year ago his father, Noah R. Sanders, a Confederate veteran, killed himself. His paternal grandfather also committed suicide.

The Lovers' Fair is Revived in France.

Paris, Oct. 25.—The "Lovers' Fair" is in vogue again. At Givet, near the Belgian frontier, the boys and girls from all the country around can meet and look each other over.

They gather, frankly to begin the courtships that end in marriage.

For generations, there as well as under other names in other towns, the "Lovers' Fair" has been an annual affair. The war interrupted these traditional country festivals, but that they served a real purpose is apparent in their revival. Young people on farms most few of their own age and the choice of mates is narrow. Authorities and older people favor the larger gatherings where all day long the young men and women talk over their likes and dislikes and make new acquaintances.

There are dances and little country fair attractions, candy booths, games of chance, fortune tellers, and sometimes a movie show with ancient films. The fair is the excuse; the real business is courtship.

There formerly were real "Husband Fairs" at Deux-Sevres and in towns in Vendee, where there were many marriages performed under an umbrella-canopy in the village square.
