physicians successed in restoring Herr Krupp to consciousness but his patient soon relapsed into insensibiliny. He died at 3 o'clock.

In the meantime the directors of the tors had been summoned. They held a in Essen that Herr Krupp was dying. but the public had no accurate information regarding his condition until the great works which dominate the city and furnish employment to great many (43,000) men were closed. The first question that everybody asked was: Did Herr Krupp commit suicide?"

There seemed to be no testimony to support this suggestion, the physicians in attendance resolutely asserting that the case was simply one of apoplexy. That considerable time elapsed after death before the news was announced is the cause of death is somewhat obscurs.
