WEDNESDAY EVENING, . . . Oct. 28, 1903

There will be no drill of the Kinston Rifles at the army tonight, but Capt. Harper asks us to say that every member is wanted at the next meeting, Wednesday night, one week from tonight as it is monthly inspection.

This morning in the Methodist church the ladies of Kinston met the pastors of the various city churches in a joint thanksgiving service for the temperance victory won yesterday. The ladies have been holding daily prayer services throughout the campaign.

Information has reached this office that the incomparable Mabel Paige will play an engagement here some time during the month of November. Kinston theatre goes will enjoy a rare treat in the appearance of the brilliant little actress of national reputation.

The weather is ideal now, but the sharp frosts are doing damage to late cotton and also the ladies' chrysanthemums, for the flower show are coming in for their share of injury. The prize flowers will be taken care of but it is thought the frosts will hasten the show.

After the spirited contest at the polls yesterday all is peace and quiet in the city today and a stranger would not know that Kinston had only yesterday wound up a very warm campaign embracing a question of public policy involving a radical change in its economic government.

Yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock Mr. F. W. Woodard, a young man in the Hines' logging camp, was fatally injured by the fall of a tree which he was cutting. The tree fell completely crushing his skull on the left side. Dr. R. A. Whitaker was summoned but the injury was of too serious a nature to be remedied, and at nine o'clock this morning Mr. Woodard died. The fatal accident occurred on the premises of Mr. W. L. Kennedy near Falling Creek, the young man's home.

Mr. E. B. Blansett, who lives within a few miles of Kinston, sold a load of tobacco at the Central warehouse today for which he received a check for $98.73. Within a few minutes after he left the warehouse office the check was stolen from his overcoat pocket where he had placed it. The check was No. 8,109 made payable to bearer by the Central warehouse. Both banks and as many merchants as possible have been notified to stop payment, in the hope that in this way the thief may be caught and the property restored.

Mr. W. H. Lassiter, of Greene county, suffered a stroke of paralysis on the streets yesterday and has not spoken since. He was taken to the doctor, and on being identified was taken to Mrs. Moore's boarding house on Heritage street, where he is now. The doctor entertains no hope for his recovery. The paralysis is on the left side and is severe. Mr. Lassiter is about 46 years old and has no family. He lives with his brother and sister on a farm in Greene county. His brother was notified and is here today.

The Ted. E. Faust Minstrels.

Bristol (Tenn.) Times.
 Surpassing in scenic beauty, richness of costume, freshness of selections, even the predictions of the advance agent, clean, wholesome and entertaining, the Ted. E. Faust Minstrels, by perfection in their production won a Bristol audience last night at the Harnelling.

Milady with Milord occupied the orchestra and from the rise of the curtain on "Sunny Italy" until the D'Arville acrobatic troupe closed the entertainment there was not one dull moment. The singing was by far the best heard at the Harnelling. In comedy, wit and repartee, the production of last evening has few if any equals. The end men were good, and their songs, dances and jokes were new. There was none of the old-time "chestnuts" usually heard from the mouths of end men. "Pop" Carr on the right and "Gov." Bowe on the left made a team hard to match.

The elite of the city attended the play. Individually the actors made good. Indeed, it was one of those productions wherein a critic is forced to the conclusion that he has reached the wrong pew. There was nothing to criticize and everything to admire. Bluntly said, the Ted. E. Faust Minstrels are the best that ever came to Bristol and placed a higher standard upon that class of amusement.

Hoyt's Comedy Company

Gave a refreshing vaudeville entertainment at Loftin's opera house last evening to a medium sized house, which enjoyed it very much. The special features are the young Bullocks, who have been here before, and their work is very clever. The dialogue between Miss Bullock and the leading comedian was very amusing and some clever hits were made by them.
 The company went to Newbern this morning and will play there tonight.

The OWL DRUG STORE

You Can Travel Many Miles through many states and you will find few drug stores that you would exchange for ours. There seems to be an indefinable something about our store which makes our patrons loyal to us. They are always telling their acquaintances about our store. We will not attempt to explain it. We simply try and conduct our store in such a way that our patrons will feel as they do. That's everything. It's the same feeling that you have toward your life-long family physician. Of course we desire to be such. Our list of patrons is not as new as you may know our town has become loyal. If we should fail to suit you we don't want your money.
