POCKETS PRETTY AND USEFUL IN NEW FASHIONS

SOME REAL GIDDY DESIGNS WITH GAUDY LININGS OTHERS CONSERVATIVE.

CAN'T DO WITHOUT FUR

It is Absolutely Essential to Style This Season—Serves in Some Cases Same Purpose Infants' Flannel Band Does.

BY MARGARET MASON (Written for the United Press)

There are pockets galore, Often two, three or more, On the new frocks front, back or each side.

They are empty of self, But Milady herself, May use them to pocket her pride.

New York, Nov. 6.—Have you there one little, two little, three little pockets peering forth coquettishly from some points of your habiliments? If not you cannot hope to be an edition de lux of a perfectly apparelled female; his winter. Not even a pocket edition.

The most of them are all giddy pockets too, some unfapped to reveal gaily colored linings of plaid, figured or Roman striped silk. Slashed across each hip seam and showing their dash of colored lining these pockets serve as unique trimming of the skirt. More demure ones bound in braid and some with envelope flaps fastening down with a jewelled or gilt button breast the wave of fashionable approval from the breast of a bodice or a short jacket-like haque while others, large and elaborately braided or embroidered, brazenly take up their pocket position right in the front of a skirt.

Quiet as essential and ornament a good point as the pocket is the use of wide bands of fur on all the best winter models. You fare worse the further from fur you go this year. All the more elegant velvet and silk costumes are bound on the north-east south and west by broad bands of fur or in other words their flaring skirts are edged with it, their flaring coats finished with it and their necks and wrists encircled with a length of hirsute hide.

With some undiscerning persons fur is fur but with the fashionable elect the selection of the proper and smart fur to combine with certain materials is a vital question. Skunk and fitch make the most popular trimmings, ermine is also a great favorite but is smartest used in its tailless state of unspotted whiteness.

Monkey fur is used as a fringe banding with chic effect and particularly in combination with other fur is it very good. Muffs and neckpieces of ermine fringed with the monkey fur are stunning and voluminous cape wraps of Persian lamb, seal or the tailless ermine finished with the straggling lengths of the ebon monkey fur are quite the last word in fur fashions. Beaver so long an outcast in the fashionable fur world as well as astrakan has been welcomed back with joyous smiles and no longer sink in furtive oblivion of fashionable ostracism.

It is rather a startling fact that this year the all fur coat which was erstwhile the goal of every woman's desire, has dropped back into second place, and this winter it is the cape of flaring coat of velvet banded, colored and cuffed in fur, which is the idol of the hour. Muffs and boas also have become extinct since the high collars of fur preclude the latter and the wide fur cuffs on all wraps make perfectly good imitations of a muff when milady's hands are clasped over her tummy.

To be sure, some muffs are shown and the most unique of these is a quiet round muff, prettily marked in chinchilla, ermine or beaver. Hard little tight little muffs affairs like our grandmothers used to carry, are smart in the longer haired furs while most of the big flat pillow muffs and draped ones are developed in velvet that is merely fur trimmed.

As a trimming fur bandings are also used with great effect, outlining the large armholes of the jumper like basques or the large sleeveless armholes on the evening gowns. No fur banding is permissible less than 3 inches in width and some finishing a flaring skirt, a Russian coat or tunic aspire to the broadness of 8 inches.

Many of the Moven Age frocks are flaunting wide loose belts of fur. As a tummy warmer it certainly puts it all over the handsoff all over the little bands of flannel worn in the same region by wehtel worn in the same region by the well regulated infant.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 7.—A letter received here by a resident from a friend near the border tells some interesting facts of the way the Germans regard the progress of the war. The letter follows:
 "I have seen a little from a very high German official who has been at the front since the beginning of the invasion of Belgium and is now in a home in which he says 'the war is not going as we expected. The resistance of the Allied forces is extraordinary, and we are beginning to feel very nervous as to the result. Our (German) losses are terrible, so terrible that the Emperor has forbidden their disclosures. Our generals have been wantonly wasteful with our men, who have been mowed down in thousands. Whilst it is impossible to say exactly what our losses are, I should estimate them between 350,000 and 400,000 altogether. If it continues at this rate much longer we shall be quite unable to meet Russia with any hope of success."
