ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE AUSTRIAN TROOPS

(Continued from Page One) is Lieutenant Carl Hoffman of the Eleventh Army Corps, and so handsome and big that I'll recommend him as a husband to any unmarried girl. 9:50 a. m.—A spherical balloon, a dirigible balloon and two aeroplanes are soaring or darting about above the hills.

10:00 a. m.—A soldier is leaning against the wall at the gateway of a convent, but the convent is only a heap of broken brick and stone. The Austrian soldiers have razed it because it obstructed the view from the forts. The soldier has only the ruins to guard and he evidently considers his task a bore.

10:20 a. m.—We cross a narrow-gauge railroad track laid over plowed farms. It is an artillery railroad. The cars are very small, but horses pull them more rapidly than wagons. There is a string of cars across the horizon. They are feeding the artillery, in the hills, two miles away, with shrapnel shells. The railroad to Sanok runs through this farm and when we pass the depot of Hermanowice we see wounded and sick men lying all about the platforms. They are waiting for trains which will carry them back to the base hospitals.

10:30 a. m.—The sound of firing is incessant and huge in volume. The Austrian batteries fire one gun at a time. The Russians are firing salvos. "One, two, three, four, five, six," go the Austrian howitzers. "D-r-r-r" go the Russian pieces, all firing at one time. Before us are hills covering miles of territory; from hilltop to hilltop and from valley to valley the battle is raging.

"How can a man paint a battle like this?" asks Adams, who has just finished a picture of the Emperor of Austria-Hungary, in seven sittings, and who usually isn't stilled by important assignments.

10:35 a. m.—Many wounded have passed us in wagons. "I'll never paint war pictures again of men going into battle singing and waving their swords," said Adams. "That man with the green twisted face on that wagon, suffering from cholera, is a more tremendous picture of war than all the exploding cannon I can paint." In the midst of all the life and activity and movement, the man was dying before our eyes. There was no one to care for him. His wagon was held in the endless stream, and it must continue whether it carried only a sick man or a dying man or a poisonous green corpse.

10:40 a. m.—Three small deer run across the road ahead of us. There are thousands of soldiers hereabouts, all with rifles, and good meat is not any too common, but the laws against poaching are imbued in the peasantry of Europe, and those deer on the battlefield are probably the safest of all living things. Battles have waged on this ground for weeks and thousands of men and horses have been killed; the hungry Russians have once held this ground, but here are the three baby deer safe and sound. Officer Makes Coward Brave. Paris.—Nothing better illustrates the relations between French officers and privates than the following incident related by a wounded soldier: "One day under the peppering of mitrailleuse fire," he said, "a soldier fighting in the first rank was overcome by panic and turned to the rear. The captain seized him by the arm, led him back to his post and remained beside him until he quieted. Shortly after we charged bayonet, and do you know who led? It was the very man who wanted to fly. The captain had inoculated him with his own courage." adv.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years' Standing, Relieved by Cardui. Mt. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell. I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good. I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together. My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it." Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlasting tired feeling? If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century. Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it.
