SEPARATE BLOUSE, CONDEMNED TO DIE, AGAIN REPRIEVED

More Novelties Now In the Line Than for Many Seasons

FANCY WAISTS OF SEASON

Velvet a New Material in Their Making—Silk Waist in Black and White Stripes Attractive—Endless Array of Styles

By Margaret Mason (Written for the United Press)

Some people call a waist a waste and others who refuse to let a chance to air their French Go by, call it a "blouze." To others it's a simple blouse To rhyme with mouse and yet a "blouze"

Its dubbed by some and on the Strand A bodice, so I understand, Is what the English choose. Yet waist, blouse, "blouze" or any name Its sure to cost you just the same.

New York, Dec. 11.—Condemned to death every season the separate blouse succeeds unflinching to get a reprieve at the last minute and continue a perpetual fashionable existence. It is true that the death blow did fall upon one branch of the waist family this year for the lingerie waist had actual wasted quite away.

Perhaps more novelties in the blouse line have been introduced this winter than for many preceding seasons. The surplice blouse, the basque blouse and both the jacket blouse and the vest waist are all practically new. The surplice bodice is prettiest developed in soft crepe de chine pussy willow taffeta, satin or velvet. The loose front pieces of the waist are cut long enough to cross in front and pass around the waist like a girdle which fastens behind. The sleeves of the surplice waist are long, as are the sleeves of all the really smart blouses, and the collar, a high half collar effect. This means that it is high and tight in the back and ends just behind the ears, leaving the front of the throat exposed in a long graceful line that fits in admirably with the loose draping of the surplice.

The jacket and vest waist are simply loose long sleeved blouses of transparent lace, net chiffon with the jacket or vest in velvet or heavy satin in a contrasting shade or black worn over them. The possibilities and varieties of these bodices are endless and they are the joy of the woman with a limited pocket book, for she can get the credit of a versatile wardrobe by owning one pretty lace waist and two or three little different toned and oddly cut jackets and vests. It certainly is a case where she slips one over.

Many of the plain tailored waists of pussy willow taffeta have high chokers and this is especially true of the semi-fitted basque waists that button severely from the top of the high collar to the normal waist line with out a frill or a fluff to break the monotony.

Lovely tub waists in washable satin, crepe de chine and taffeta are charming in softest shades of pink, blue, maize and ivory. They are all self trimmed with tiny tucks and hemstitching as a feature of the seams and a finishing for the collar, cuffs and the outline of the yoke or satin of the raglan sleeves.

Velvet as a separate waist material is a new departure, this season that has been welcomed with open arms. It is especially attractive in combination with lace, net or chiffon and almost all of the velvet waists show transparent sleeves. The craze for metallic effects has resulted in a lavish use of gold and silver lace as waist trimming and they are very smart indeed on the velvet bodices. A charming substitute for the gold metallic effect which alas tarnishes all too soon is an all over lace exactly the shade of gold. Several artistic waists using this lace for deep yoke and sleeves while the lower portion is of plain chiffon in the newest shades of Russian green, tete de nigre, or corbeau blue are indispensable additions to a wardrobe which relies upon a suit and separate blouse to furnish a dressy afternoon toilette. Silk waists in black and white stripes, Roman stripes plaid or checks are very chic for traveling or morning wear and more elaborate dress-up ones are very striking in Dresden flowered taffetas.

Indeed so endless and fetching are the many styles and materials this season that it would be hard not to find some one blouse to please even the most perverse. So artistic and well done is the workmanship and so really superior are the fabrics used for most of these confections also that it is really a thrifty person who spends most of her money waistfully this winter.

Many professional men file along in line between stenographers and school girls. Doctors, lawyers and clergymen all seem anxious to possess the handsomely bound black leather volume which looks like a fine Bible and which they describe as "comprehensive" and above all else "handy." "I've got plenty of dictionaries," a prominent physician said, who came with two sets of certificates and carried away two dictionaries, one for his home and one for his office, "but this is the handiest one that I've seen. I'll use it ten times as much as I use the others. I've read The Free Press for years, and I expect to keep on reading it."

"Young man, don't bother showing me that book," an old man said. I've read your paper for years and I have faith enough to take your word for it. If you say the book is right, it is right, and I know it. Give it to me." "I am surprised at the extensive vocabulary this book contains," an educator said. "It even has the modern slang which has come to be everyday English with us."
