ARE YOU A SUFFRAGETTE?

Miss Sybil Hyatt, president of the Kinston Equal Suffrage League, has been instructed by the State officers to prepare a list of the persons in Lenoir county sympathizing with the "cause." She asks all these to telephone or send a postal to her, giving their names and addresses. "This is very little to do to help the work, when there are women who are giving all their time and hundreds of dollars a month," says Miss Hyatt.

Membership dues in the league are $1 a year. This money goes for campaign expenses. The league hopes to put on a play, "Your Girl and Mine," at the Grand Theater in April, for the benefit of the cause.

A REVIEW OF THE COTTON SITUATION

One of the Most Interesting Weeks
Since Opening of the Exchange—Market Remarkably Resistant to Conditions.

(Reported by R. H. Rountree & Co.)

New York, March 5.—We have had
one of the most interesting weeks since the exchange opened. The news that England would put an embargo on all trade with Germany, both in and out of the empire, created something of a consternation in certain cotton circles, owing to the fear that it would be impossible to get cotton to either Germany or Austria and so result in the throwing of more cotton on the market here. The effect of the news was to create considerable pessimism and bring out cotton held by many longs, with a decline of about 25 points in the price. Although no news has since been forthcoming to indicate what the attitude of the English Government is going to be on the subject of cotton, for some unexplained reason the market not only recovered all the loss, but even advanced 10 or 15 points above the price prevailing when the announcement was first made. This sharp advance of about 35 points in about 24 hours was followed by heavy selling for account of a prominent spot house.

The question of insurance rates is growing to be a serious one. The establishment of the war zone around Great Britain with intermittent destruction of steamers has added to the risks involved in shipping cotton to both Great Britain and the Continent, and a corresponding increase in the cost of insurance. Reports from time to time indicate that many shippers have great difficulty in obtaining the necessary insurance, except at almost prohibitive rates, and this has tended to cool any speculative ardor on the bull side after the recent recovery in prices. On the other hand, the market itself displays a most remarkable degree of resistance. Thousands of bales of cotton can be sold, these contracts all disappear in some mysterious fashion, and the market itself displays a greater desire to advance than to decline. All months rule equally firm, and the difference between May and July is practically the same this week as it was two or three months ago. This would seem to indicate a very healthy situation, revealing the fact that there are still enough buyers willing to pay a premium on fall positions to maintain this premium over the near positions, a fact that leaves the entire market without pressure so long as the South continues to hold firm on its spots.

We have now reached the points the visible supply is likely to begin to show a different tendency from that existing since the season began.
Spinners' takings each week now are more than likely to offset the insight movement, which means that those who have held cotton off the market throughout the season will curtail their planting and refuse to part with the cotton on hand unless the market changes for the better.

We still believe in buying on good recessions.
