Entertains in Honor of Prospective Bride.

The following, from the Greenville Reflector, will be of interest in Kinston:
 Mrs. C. S. Carr was hostess to a number of friends Friday afternoon in honor of Miss Lillian Carr, whose marriage to Mr. Hunter Fleming, of Kinston, will take place next week. The house was attractively decorated with cut flowers, American Beauties and chrysanthemums forming a conspicuous part of the decorations. Tables were arranged for auction bridge and took. Small work baskets were given for the first progression and accessories for the baskets were given for the other progressions. The honoree was presented a lovely silk work bag and the visitor's prize also a work bag, was given to Miss Gretchen Taylor of Greensboro. After the games, the cards were removed and attractive lunch sets in keeping with the autumn season were arranged on the tables and an elegant two-course luncheon was served.

REV. F. S. LOVE WILL STAY IN THE OLD NORTH STATE

Former Pastor of Queen Street Methodist Church Was Heard by Large Number of His Former Congregation Sunday—From Brazil.

Rev. F. S. Love, former pastor of Queen Street Methodist church here, who has recently returned after a two-years' stay in Brazil, will remain in North Carolina, he told a Free Press representative this morning. The climate in the Brazilian town near Rio, in which he was located, is debilitating to say the least. Then, a change in the administration of the Methodist College there in which he was professor of psychology and English made it rather difficult for him to serve with satisfaction to himself.

Mr. Love will apply to the Methodist conference at Wilmington in December for a charge in North Carolina. He will, of course, get a good pastorate, since he is one of the best known men in the conference. He preached to a large congregation in Queen Street church Sunday.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Present Program Exceeds Hobson's and Gardner's.

7. The Regular, Orderly, Normal Program:

At the last session of Congress (this year) the President, the Secretary of the Navy, Admiral Fletcher and other Naval Commanders, and the Democrats in Congress opposed the program of the Hobsons, Gardners and other jingoes (much smaller than the present proposed program). The policy of the Administration was summed up before the Naval Committee in the words of the Secretary of the Navy. "It would be most unwise for us to act today in any particular, as we would not have acted if there was no war. My theory is that our country ought to be carrying on its regular orderly, normal program as to the navy. With our policies and our American ideas I think the policy recommended in my report and adopted by the last session of Congress (and recommended at the last session) is the steady, development that is needed. It meets the needs of the country." The Democrats supported that policy. It was enacted into law. This same policy, as I have heretofore shown, is making our navy bigger, stronger and more efficient than ever before—the strongest in the world, except that of great Britain.

It is my undoubting conviction, that it is most unwise and dangerous at this time, especially under the present circumstances, to abandon that policy and adopt the big, enormous, revolutionary program proposed.

Non-Partisan Matter for Each Individual.

8. Why My Opposition to the Program as an Individual and Not as Majority Leader.

This is not a party or partisan question. The President so declares. Everybody knows it is not. It is one for each individual member to decide as his vote for himself. The majority members of the Ways and Means Committee, in the first instance, make up the Committee assignments of the House. I am chairman of the committee, which carries with it the position of majority leader. I shall not use such position in influencing in any way any member on the question. Those who oppose my position and those who endorse it will be treated alike as to their assignments to committees and as to all other matters which I, as such chairman and leader, and the members of the House, individually or collectively, are concerned.

Pays Respects to New York Herald.

9. The Attacks by the New York Herald:

This paper (whose owner, years ago, disdaining the fellowship of Americans, abandoned his native country to live amid the high life of Paris, and who, by cable from Paris, dictates its policy) has been fighting the Democratic Party nearly twenty years. This is the same paper which only a few months ago, to show its disgust of and contempt for President Wilson, while with the consummate statesmanship he was steering the country safely through its greatest crisis, loudly exclaimed:—

"Oh, for a Roosevelt in the White House!"

The purported interview by its Washington correspondent with me, published in its issue of November 10th, parts of which have been published in every issue since, is a pure fabrication, a deliberate falsehood, manufactured in the Herald's New York offices for the purpose of forming a basis for its succeeding attacks and sensational stories. No such interview ever occurred. I never saw or spoke to its correspondent before its publication. After reading it in the Herald, I saw and asked its Washington correspondent if he sent such an interview to the Herald. He said he had not and knew nothing of it until he saw it published in the Herald. I never made a reference in the remotest way to any one in Washington or elsewhere as to the "sentiment in my district" or as to "the folks back home." It knew, too, or could have known, as its Washington correspondent knew, that I did not "return to my district because of its exposures of the sentiment in my district." I returned the day I intended to return when three days before I went to Washington.
