Aristocratic Swine.
Ten hogs arrived here today from the Carolina mountains for eight members of the Lenoir County Pig Club and a firm of planters. Two of the drove were sows, the other eight 12-week-old pigs. All were peddled to the limit and nicely groomed.

Bad Meat Condemned.
Two hog carcasses have been condemned by Sanitary Inspector T. A. Conway this week. The meat was sprayed and carried out of the city. One animal came from Lenoir county and one from Jones. Both cases were voluntarily reported by dealers.

Colored Episcopalians to Give Concert.
Musical talent from the choir and congregation of St. Augustine's Episcopal church, colored, will give a concert in Holloway's Hall, on East Bright street, on the night of May 11th. A special invitation is extended to white people.

Miss Casey Leaves Dr. Parrott.
Miss Annie B. Walker, a graduate from the Charlotte Sanitarium, came a few days ago to substitute for Miss Mary Casey in the office of Dr. W. T. Parrott. Miss Casey has held this position, a very responsible one, for three years. She resigns to be with her mother in Wayne county, whose health is not good at present. Miss Casey will remain in Dr. Parrott's office until Miss Walker, who is highly recommended and is said to be one of the most efficient surgical assistants in the State, becomes conversant with the work.

RHEUMATIC PAINS STOPPED.
The drawing of muscles, the soreness, stiffness and agonizing pain of Rheumatism quickly yield to Sloan's Liniment. It stimulates circulation to the painful part. Just apply as directed to the sore spots. In a short time the pain gives way to a tingling sensation of comfort and warmth. Here's proof—"I have had wonderful relief since I used your Liniment on my knee. To think one application gave me relief. Sorry I haven't space to tell you the history. Thanking you for what your remedy has done for me."—James S. Ferguson, Philadelphia, Pa. Sloan's Liniment kills pain. 25c at Druggists. adv.

BY-PRODUCTS OF INSURANCE

Life Insurance Companies Render a Great Service Through Efficient Investment Departments.

Life insurance has many by-products. The service rendered by the investment departments of the companies is one of them. Amounts collected in premiums are not sufficient to mature policies, but premiums collected plus interest earnings are sufficient. The investment of these accumulated payments of insurance is necessary, and the interest earnings are essential in the maturing of insurance plans. The insurance companies, therefore, become an important source of money supply and serve those in need of more capital—the man who desires to develop or enlarge his farm, or the man who plans a business block or a home as well as the men who build railroads or plan and carry out other large undertakings. An examination of the list bonds, mortgages and other securities held by insurance reveals a service in money supply far greater than is generally supposed. It is probable that many of the best systems of business, so useful in country-wide development, could not have been financed at all except for life insurance service. The New York Times also in a good illustration of this by-product. About $200,000,000 of the money used in the rebuilding of the wonderful city was furnished by life insurance.

Life insurance, with its brother organizations—liability, casualty and fire insurance organizations—is rendering tremendously important service in many directions. The companies in doing honestly in official positions and among employees protect organizations and employers, and furnish a strong incentive toward effective and honest service, helping in a large way to make business dependable and to inculcate rules of honesty in all business transactions. The casualty companies with their campaign of safety first teach people to live carefully and to avoid accidents. It is to their advantage to reduce the number of the halt, the maimed, and the blind to the largest extent. They want every man to be in the possession of his senses and to have two feet and two hands and to be efficient. The fire companies are teaching the proper construction and care of buildings and the prevention of waste. They want structures to be constructed and to stand for government use. Piles of ashes do not appeal to them. Life insurance, through the various medical departments and otherwise, teach healthful living, and conduct extensive campaigns for the elimination of preventable diseases and for the maintenance of health. The span of human life is being lengthened, and the conditions under which we live are being steadily improved. These by-products of insurance, in the aggregate, render such tremendous human service that the most liberal estimate will be no more than a weak approximation.—E. W. Randall.

DISTRIBUTION OF RISKS
It is Clearly Understood That the Fundamental Idea and Basis of Insurance Remains the Same.

The economic function of insurance, the fundamental idea which was originally its basis and which remains so, has long been clearly understood. A proper distribution of financial risks is of necessity the very basis of all insurance. To a realization of the need of such distribution the idea of insurance owes its origin. If it were not for the feeling on the part of society at large that calamity in general, whether due to the elements, to the immutable laws of life, to the hazards of existence, or to the frailties of mankind, can best be cared for by dividing the cost of each calamity in particular among as large a number as possible of the members of society, so that it will not fall with crushing effect upon one, there would be no sufficient reason for the existence of the great business of insurance in all its many ramifications.

This feeling, originally entertained nearly three thousand years ago in connection with the manifest perils of traffic by sea, has spread by degrees, and of late with astonishing rapidity, until now it is applied to every imaginable possibility, and even to some possibilities which give the imagination a rather severe strain.

Get baby a new go-cart, then he won't cry
Dear Amy:
My life was a burden to me a long time Baby John just cried and cried. I didn't know what was the matter. He was also looking pale and his food didn't agree with him. I didn't know it, but he needed air and sunshine. So I went and bought him a new go-cart. Now he smiles and is fat and rosy. You just must come and see him.
Always your pal,
Lou.
