They are now residing at Tempe, Ariz., where Mr. Rountree has a pastorate of the Christian church. The towns in the irrigated sections of the Southwest, Mr. Weyher states, are very well kept and attractive places. He saw many soldiers en route to the border. FACT AND FICTION

Falcon is a little place without a railroad station, a short distance from Godwin, and comparatively few people in the State know of it or the annual camp-meeting held there which is making the hamlet famous in the North and West. Falcon is the seat of an institute or embryo college of the Pentecostal Holiness church. During the past two weeks it has been the scene of the biggest religious gathering held in Eastern Carolina in many years. One estimate placed the number of people in attendance at 12,000. It was interdenominational in spirit and one of the preachers was a member of another denomination, but the Holiness people were greatly in the majority and furnished most of the pulpites. The denomination is comparatively in its infancy, the present organization having been perfected only about sixteen years ago, but now has missionaries in practically every foreign field and a growing membership in the South and on the Pacific Coast.

Rev. A. H. Butler of Kinston has just returned from Falcon and tells of the great campmeeting. Many States and Canada were represented in the congregations camping around the institute buildings. While testimonials were being given one morning Mr. Butler was impressed with the number of nationalities among those testifying. A Chinese, a German, a Russian and an American spoke in that order. The Pentecostal people purposely selected a place away from a railroad for their institute and camp-meeting place, because the great crowds that throng to it once every year can be kept under better control in a quiet, secluded spot, and the students can be better disciplined during the scholastic year.

HOW ENGLAND SAVED THE AMERICAN COTTON CROP FROM DISASTER; UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT ON TO THE PLAN; BRITISH AID NOT NECESSARY, BELIEVED

London, Aug. 3.—(By Mail)—That the British government decided not to let American cotton to go below 81-2 cents a pound to planters; that it prepared to spend 250 million to prevent a possible cotton panic in America; and that it sent agents to the United States to buy cotton in unlimited quantities to keep the price normal; and also that these agents are still in the United States, are facts given to the United Press today.

The British government, when it decided in 1915 to "make cotton contraband, realized that it might cause a panic in the United States. Felix Rose, who directed the British plan to prevent this, told today how he did it.

"We had to declare cotton contraband," said he, "but we wanted to protect the cotton planters. We knew the speculators would make capital of the order in council and drive cotton prices to ruinous depths.

"So the British government decided to go into the market as a buyer. I looked over the market and decided we should be ready to buy 5 million bales; and we had to have 250 million dollars at our disposal constantly.

"We thought the planter should not get less than 81-2 cents, so we sent agents to the United States with unlimited authority to buy. That was in July of 1915. We told the American government of our plan. On August 18th the king signed the order in council, declaring cotton contraband.

"No panic followed. What we had done was not generally known and the strength of cotton in the open market must have been a mystery to the speculators. In the first week cotton went up a cent. Within a month it was up 31-2 cents. So the planters received $60,000,000 more for the crop that year than they would have received in normal times."

"Is the British government ready to follow with the same action for the 1916 crop?" was asked.

"It looks as if the 1916 crop would be able to sell itself without British aid," said Rose. Rose, an Englishman, has been in the cotton business all his life. He added in conclusion that every bale of cotton that has been seized by the British has been paid for and to shipper has lost money except possibly on cotton for which he would have received an exorbitant profit if he had gotten it to Germany instead of its being seized by the British. Every bale seized, he said, had been sold to spinners in England and not a single bale remains in storage.

Some of its good Points

Steel-dust-proof roller bearings are used in the axle and bevel gear shaft. These insure easy running. The large gear and a small pinion are set back of the main axle and are well shielded. They always mesh perfectly, and the machine is in perfect balance. The crank shaft, of special steel, runs in a horizontal position under the main axle and retains oil on the bearings. Separate boxes at each end hold the shaft in line. The cutter bar is steel and smooth on the under side. The guards are fitted with serrated steel plates. The steel push bar is in one piece and is adjustable. Let us show you
