"Tinker Bob" Stories

by Carlyle H. Holcomb

MR. CHUCK SHOULDERS THE HUNTER'S GUN.

"What in the world are you doing with the Hunter's gun?" asked Mr. Chuck. "I can't see what the King of the Forest would want with a gun when you know that the creatures are all afraid of such things."

"But you don't understand, Mr. Chuck. You see the Hunter lost his gun and I am returning it to him. I am not carrying a gun to harm any of the creatures of the forest."

"Let me see the gun, O King. Is it anything that will hurt me?"

"It will hurt nothing unless it is fired. You can see for yourself."

"I want to be able to tell my children what they shall look for when they see anyone traveling in the forest." Mr. Chuck came out of his hole to examine the gun. "Well, of all things, I never thought a gun looked like that. It's long and round with a hole in the middle, and the hole goes all the way thru."

Tinker Bob let Mr. Chuck take hold of the gun. "Now what's this thing in the middle?"

"That is the trigger that you pull when you want to fire the gun. You'd better not touch that or it will go off and hurt you. Now I'll show you how to carry a gun when you are not using it. Lay it across your shoulder this way and hold to the butt of it. That's the way soldiers march."

Mr. Chuck took the gun put it across his shoulder and started to march away. "I'll tell you," said the King, "you return the gun to the Hunter and tell him I, the King, sent it to him and want him to keep out of the forest with it or I'll call the Great Spirit and the next time he comes he will lose more than his gun."

"But if I go to see the Hunter he will take the gun from me and shoot."

"Be not afraid of that. I will be with you but he will not see me. The King of the Forest will protect you, Mr. Chuck."

"If anything should happen to me, O King, my children would not know what to do for the winter. You see, they never saw a winter and would not be ready unless I should be there to tell them what to do. The little fellows are pretty shy yet and not able to gather all the things they need."

"But I thought, Mr. Chuck, that you slept all winter," said Tinker.

"The hole goes all the way thru."

"Ah, I do sleep; all good Chucks sleep in the winter time but I must make ready enough food to keep us till it comes time to sleep. I never sleep till Jack Frost puts a crust of ice on the lake. From then you see us no more."

"I will see to it that you will not be harmed by the Hunter; let us go." Mr. Chuck marched away with the Hunter's gun on his shoulder, and the forest King followed him unseen.

Tomorrow—Mr. Chuck Delivers the Gun.
