NOON DISPATCHES.

HON. HORACE GREELEY!

The Tribune on the Death of its Chief.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The Tribune says: The melancholy death of the Editor and founder of the Tribune, though for the past four days it has been momentarily expected by his family and intimate friends, falls upon us with all the shock of sudden calamity. He had reached indeed a ripe old age, but time had not laid its withering touch upon him. His splendid constitution easily bore the strain of enormous labor. His generous impulses were unchilled by disheartening experience. Through the trying campaign which has just closed, his physical vigor, his tact, his intellectual activity, surprised even those who knew him and seemed to promise many years of usefulness.

It is certain that no history of the most critical period in our national life, can be written in which Horace Greeley shall not be a conspicuous figure; but the noblest career in his eyes, was that which is given up to other's wants. The successful life was that which is worn out in conflict with wrong and woe. The only ambition worth following was the ambition to alleviate human misery and leave the world a little better than he found it. That he had done it, was the consolation which brightened his last days and assured him, he had not lived in vain. It is not for us in the first hour of our loss to paint his character or catalogue his virtues. Although for several months we have missed the inspiration of his presence and the guidance of his wise council, his spirit has never ceased to animate those chosen to continue his works, and the close bond of sympathy between the editor and his assistants, has never been broken. We leave his praises to the poor, whom he succored—to the lowly whom he lifted up—to the slave whose back he saved from the lash—to the oppressed whose wrongs he made his own.

The Herald, in its editorial on Greeley, says: He has, in a mistaken aspiration for a higher field of usefulness and power and glory than journalism, fallen a sacrifice to his political ambition. He had failed to appreciate the commanding position which he had succeeded as a leading American journalist, and leaving it to pursue the ignis fatuus of the Presidency, he dropped the substance for the shadow of a great distinction. Otherwise, the history and enduring rewards of Mr. Greeley's industrious and useful career are full of encouragements to young men, who, without capital, personal influence or powerful friends, have the battle of life before them.

Cyrille Dixon beat John Deary for $1,000 and a diamond eue. There were 19 innings; score 1,500 to 1,201.

ALABAMA.

MONTGOMERY, Nov. 30.—This morning detachments of the 7th U. S. Cavalry marched to a point twenty yards, from Capitol grounds and bivouacked. Intense excitement followed, but learning that troops were intended for a mere posse comitatus and not to drive the Legislature from the Capitol, excitement subsided somewhat. Legislature at the Capitol passed a bill and sent it to Governor Lewis, but he refused to receive it. A joint resolution passed raising a committee to communicate facts of situation express great satisfaction by telegraph to government at Washington, and appointing a delegate to present written statement of case to President—the Legislature express great confidence that President will sustain them when the facts are laid before him.

In answer to committee of Capitol, Governor Lewis yesterday, replied that two bodies claim his recognition, that the members of the other body received a majority of the votes cast and that he could not recognize the Capitol Legislature, because if the persons, whom he said did not receive a majority, were excluded, the body would be without a quorum. The court-house body did nothing to-day, but has been in secret session a considerable portion of the day. The Advertiser, the Central Liberal Democratic organ of State in its issue to-morrow morning says that in view of the death of Mr. Greeley, we recommend all the Greeley electors cast their votes for Grant and make his election unanimous, and in return let us only ask for protection against vagabonds and scoundrels; or at last that the Government will allow us fair play, and maintain the supremacy of Law and order. Our struggle has not been for men but for safety, law and civilization.
